this book advocates the development of international social work both as offering an important perspective on practice at local level and as a distinct form of cross border and supra national activity the author argues that the effects of globalization and regional policies on the welfare sector have implications for the users of social services and community development programmes which require all social professionals to have a better understanding of these processes and consequences and of the international networks through which they themselves might operate some of the material used is of a comparative nature for instance in relation to the education of social professionals or their relationship with the state or the family and examples are drawn from a wide range of countries but there is also a thematic treatment of three phenomena which are seen to have significant international dimensions that is poverty migration and disasters the book considers the role of social professionals in relation to these themes and identifies greater scope for intervention in relation to a range of social problems at international levels the central thesis of Lawrence Hogue's book is that criticism of Afro-American literature has left out of account the way in which ideological pressures dictate the canon. This fresh approach to the study of the social, ideological and political dynamics of the Afro-American literary text in the twentieth century, based on the Foucauldian concept of literature as social institution, examines the universalization that power effects, how literary texts are appropriated to meet ideological concerns and needs, and the continued oppression of dissenting voices. Hogue presents an illuminating discussion of the publication and review history of major and neglected texts. He illustrates the acceptance of texts as exotica, as sociological documents, or as carriers of sufficient literary conventions to receive approbation, although the Sixties movement allowed the text to move to the periphery of the dominant ideology, providing some new myths about the Afro-American historical past. This marginal position was subsequently sabotaged, co-opted, or appropriated. Afros became a fad, presidents gave the soul handshake, the hip talking black was dressing one style and talking another. This study includes extended discussion of four works: Ernest J. Gaines's The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, Alice Walker's The Third Life of Grange Copeland, Albert Murray's Train Whistle Guitar, and Toni Morrison's Sula. Hogue assesses the informing worldviews of each and the extent and nature of their acceptance by the dominant American cultural apparatus.
