Climate Change Adaptation Manual 2018-10-23 due to the lack of success in climate change mitigation efforts the importance of adaptation is becoming more and more apparent and is now one of the main imperatives of international research and action however research on adaptation is mostly not directly applicable to adaptation policy or practice leaving a gap between scientific results and practical advice for decision makers and planners this book seeks to address this problem and bridge the gap and should provide readers with practical and applicable information on climate change adaptation following an introduction the book is organised into four main sections each reflecting an essential component in the adaptation process climate change adaptation is an emerging subject area and has gained increased political and academic attention within the last decade whereas most books in the field focus on adaptation in developing countries this volume provides an examination of predominantly european policy and offers interdisciplinary insight into cutting edge knowledge and lessons learnt in a relatively new field of implementation researcher and zen practitioner examines the evolving psychological processes and brain changes associated with the path of long range meditative training austin draws not only on the latest neuroscience research and new neuroimaging studies but also on zen literature and his personal experience with alternate states of consciousness zen brain reflections takes up where the earlier book left off it addresses such questions as how do placebos and acupuncture change the brain can neuroimaging studies localize the sites where our notions of self arise how can the latest brain imaging methods monitor meditators more effectively how do long years of meditative training plus brief enlightened states produce pivotal transformations in the physiology of the brain in many chapters testable hypotheses suggest ways to correlate normal brain functions and meditative training with the phenomena of extraordinary states of consciousness after briefly introducing the topic of zen and describing recent research into meditation austin reviews the latest studies on the amygdala frontotemporal interactions and paralimbic extensions of the limbic system he then explores different states of consciousness both the early superficial absorptions and the later major peak experiences this discussion begins with the states called kensho and satori and includes a fresh analysis of their several different expressions of oneness he points beyond the still more advanced states toward that rare ongoing stage of enlightenment that is manifest as sage wisdom finally with reference to a delayed moonlight phase of kensho austin envisions novel links between migraines and metaphors moonlight and mysticism the zen perspective on the self and consciousness is an ancient one readers will discover how relevant zen is to the neurosciences and how each field can illuminate the other

Wilful Blindness 2007-06 the book explores the ambivalent relationship between identity agency and personal data in the age of digitalisation using qualitative empirical research including a heterogeneous sample the author analyses the conditions under which humans share personal data construct their selves and act socially the results show how different data and the meaning attached to them vary over time and thus create distortions and fragmentations in relation to how the self is represented the subjects face a loss of agency in light of the power ascribed to data which are often perceived and positioned as objective and unchallengeable this leads to a sense of unease about sharing data for which different coping techniques are found the book critically reflects on these findings and concludes both empirically and theoretically on how identity and agency are constituted in the digital world and the educational implications that result out of this dynamic
