from ken burns's documentaries to historical dramas such as roots from a e s biography series to cnn television has become the primary source for historical information for tens of millions of americans today why has television become such a respected authority what falsehoods enter our collective memory as truths how is one to know what is real and what is imagined or ignored by producers directors or writers gary edgerton and peter rollins have collected a group of essays that answer these and many other questions the contributors examine the full spectrum of historical genres but also institutions such as the history channel and production histories of such series as the jack benny show which ran for fifteen years the authors explore the tensions between popular history and professional history and the tendency of some academics to declare the past off limits to nonscholars several of them point to the tendency for television histories to embed current concerns and priorities within the past as in such popular shows as quantum leap and dr quinn medicine woman the result is an insightful portrayal of the power television possesses to influence our culture examining the public information strategies employed by the league of nations between 1919 and 1940 this book brings together international history intellectual history and the history of communications to tell the story of how officials in geneva planned for a new kind of public relations to underpin and strengthen the league s internationalist project drawing on multi archival work and shedding light on the role played by journalists in international diplomacy it follows in the footsteps of individuals who left promising careers to work for the league s information section and shape opinion on a global scale showcasing their vision for an open diplomacy and an informed international public seidenfaden shows how this was sought for and achieved against the politically charged backdrop of interwar europe moving beyond the outbreak of wwii it also shows the legacies that remained after the league was in hiatus and many of its officials in exile in doing so this book reveals how public information strategies developed by the league were transferred into its successor organisation the united nations which continues to shape our world today

Strategic Communication 2011-04-07 as philip taylor has written the challenge of the modern information age is to ensure that no single propaganda source gains monopoly over the information and images that shape our thoughts if this happens the war propagandists will be back in business again propaganda came of age in the twentieth century the development of mass and multi media offered a fertile ground for propaganda while global conflict provided the impetus needed for its growth propaganda has however become a portmanteau word which can be interpreted in a number of different ways what are the characteristic features of propaganda and how can it be defined the distinguished contributors to this book trace the development of techniques of opinion management from the first world war to the current conflict in afghanistan they reveal how state leaders and spin doctors operating at the behest of the state sought to shape popular attitudes at home and overseas endeavouring to harness new media with the objective of winning hearts and minds the book provides compelling evidence of how the study and practice of propaganda today is shaped by its history wars have dominated politics since history began in the modern era most of what the media reports on foreign conflicts comes from a small band of war correspondents as the furore over the iraq afghan and now the libyan wars demonstrates western governments and militaries often collude to keep their voters in the dark about the causes and the conduct of wars waged in their name in this entertaining and unspun account of modern war reporting the authors ask whether the media itself drives democracies to war or does it serve to constrain evil ignorant and messianic leaders are the heirs of william howard russell the first modern war reporter watchdogs or lapdogs in the age of wikileaks and corrupt media empires what is the political impact of war correspondents are they the heroes or harlots of their profession
