whether or not we ever had a grandfather or a grandmother with a garden merely to say it calls to mind so much of delight and yearning and wonder that old timey comforting sense of security the smell of fresh earth turned the excitement of the discovery of the magic of flowers vegetables and indeed all growing things when one is very young or in between or knowing for sure what love is by then when one is very old in this book we meet what at the favored level increasing thousands aspire to one might call a prototypical family of father mother and four children and of course grandfather once he was known as the world s most brilliant plant scientist now most people including father and mother think he s guite cuckoo but rachel gwendoln timothy and rawlson know better off they run to live with grandfather and listen to his stories night after night they revel in the adventures of the mifwump the carrot who wanted to be a speed boat racer babbage the cabbage thudglinka the tumbling tumbleweeds and phyllis the talking pillbox and every day they work with grandfather in the fields of all the super vegetables that because everybody thinks he s cuckoo he s growing in secret to feed the world every day they get to thump and test carrots as big as themselves eggplants as big as elephants corn even twice as high as an elephant s eye so that maybe someday nobody will ever again have to go to bed hungry but then it happens father and mother find where they re hiding will they have to go home again what will happen to grandfather and all the super vegetables and all the people in
