now that there s software in everything how can you make anything secure understand how to engineer dependable systems with this newly updated classic in security engineering a guide to building dependable distributed systems third edition cambridge university professor ross anderson updates his classic textbook and teaches readers how to design implement and test systems to withstand both error and attack this book became a best seller in 2001 and helped establish the discipline of security engineering by the second edition in 2008 underground dark markets had let the bad guys specialize and scale up attacks were increasingly on users rather than on technology the book repeated its success by showing how security engineers can focus on usability now the third edition brings it up to date for 2020 as people now go online from phones more than laptops most servers are in the cloud online advertising drives the internet and social networks have taken over much human interaction many patterns of crime and abuse are the same but the methods have evolved ross anderson explores what security engineering means in 2020 including how the basic elements of cryptography protocols and access control translate to the new world of phones cloud services social media and the internet of things who the attackers are from nation states and business competitors through criminal gangs to stalkers and playground bullies what they do from phishing and carding through sim swapping and software exploits to ddos and fake news security psychology from privacy through ease of use to deception the economics of security and dependability why companies build vulnerable systems and governments look the other way how dozens of industries went online well or badly

the joint committee on human rights calls for a fundamental independent review of the necessity for and proportionality of all counter terrorism measures adopted since september 11 2001 it questions the way that the policy imperatives of national security and public safety have been used to justify squeezing out human rights considerations since september 11 2001 the government has continuously claimed that there is a public emergency threatening the life of the nation the committee questions whether the country has really been in this state for over eight years a permanent state of emergency skews public debate about the justification for rights limiting counter terrorism measures it is unacceptable that the director general of the security service refuses to appear before it to give public evidence despite giving public lectures and media interviews the committee finds the government's narrow definition of complicity in torture significant and worrying and calls for an urgent independent inquiry into the allegations of complicity in torture the government should drop the draft bill still being held in reserve to allow pre charge detention to be extended to 42 days and more work should be done on measures such as bail and the use of intercept evidence that could reduce the use of pre charge detention the intelligence and security committee should become a proper parliamentary committee with an independent secretariat and legal advice and appointing an independent reviewer of counter terror legislation who reports directly to parliament not the government
