this book presents research into the urban archaeology of 19th century australia it focuses on the detailed archaeology of 20 cesspits in the rocks area of sydney and the commonwealth block site in melbourne it also includes discussions of a significant site in sydney first government house the book is anchored around a detailed comparison of contents of 20 cesspits created during the 19th century and examines patterns of similarity and dissimilarity presenting analyses that work towards an integration of historical and archaeological data and perspectives the book also outlines a transnational framework of comparison that assists in the larger context related to building a truly global archaeology of the modern city this framework is directly related a multi scalar approach to urban archaeology historical archaeologists have been advocating the need to explore the archaeology of the modern city using several different scales or frames of reference the most popular and most basic of these has been the household however it has also been acknowledged that interpreting the archaeology of households beyond the notion that every household and associated archaeological assemblage is unique requires archaeologists and historians to compare and contrast and to establish patterns these comparisons frequently occur at the level of the area or district in the same city where archaeologists seek to derive patterns that might be explained as being the result of status class ethnicity or ideology other less frequent comparisons occur at larger scales for example between cities or countries acknowledging that the archaeology of the modern western city is also the archaeology of modern global forces of production consumption trade immigration and ideology formation this book makes a contribution to that general literature archaeologists excavating burials often find that they are not the first to disturb the remains of the dead graves from many periods frequently show signs that others have been digging and have moved or taken away parts of the original funerary assemblage displaced bones and artefacts traces of pits and damage to tombs or coffins can all provide clues about post burial activities the last two decades have seen a rapid rise in interest in the study of post depositional practices in graves which has now developed into a new subfield within mortuary archaeology this follows a long tradition of neglect with disturbed graves previously regarded as interesting only to the degree they revealed evidence of the original funerary deposit this book explores past human interactions with mortuary deposits delving into the different ways graves and human remains were approached by people in the past and the reasons that led to such encounters the primary focus of the volume is on cases of unexpected interference with individual graves soon after burial re encounters with human remains not anticipated by those who performed the funerary rites and constructed the tombs however a first step is always to distinguish these from natural and accidental processes and methodological approaches are a major theme of discussion interactions with the remains of the dead are explored in eleven chapters ranging from the new kingdom of egypt to viking age norway and from bronze age slovakia to the ancient maya each discusses cases of re entries into graves including desecration tomb re use destruction of grave contents as well as the removal of artefacts and human remains for reasons from material gain to commemoration symbolic appropriation ancestral rites political chicanery and retrieval of relics the introduction presents many of the methodological issues which recur throughout the contributions as this is a developing area with new approaches being applied to analyze post depositional processes in graves archaeology of spiritualities provides a fresh exploration of the interface between archaeology and religion spirituality archaeological approaches to the study of religion have typically and often unconsciously drawn on western paradigms especially judaeo christian mono theistic frameworks and academic rationalisations archaeologists have rarely reflected on how these approaches have framed and constrained their choices of methodologies research questions hypotheses definitions interpretations and analyses and have neglected an important dimension of religion the human experience of the numinous the power presence or experience of the supernatural within the religions of many of the world s peoples sacred experiences particularly in relation to sacred landscapes and beings connected with those landscapes are often given greater emphasis while doctrine and beliefs are relatively less important archaeology of spiritualities asks how such experiences might be discerned in the archaeological record how do we recognize and investigate other forms of religious or spiritual experience in the remains of the past the volume opens up a space to explore critically and reflexively the encounter between archaeology and diverse cultural expressions of spirituality it showcases experiential and experimental methodologies in this area of the discipline an unconventional approach within the archaeology of religion thus archaeology of spiritualities offers a unique timely and innovative contribution one that is also challenging and stimulating it is a great resource to archaeologists historians religious scholars and others interested in cultural and religious heritage

Archaeology: The Key Concepts 2013-09-05

these essays urge archaeologists to reexamine and to change their basic assumptions about how we assign value to cultural places and beyond that how we should understand and manage our heritage throughout much of the world at the heart of the complex field of cultural resource management is the work archaeologists do to determine the significance of a particular site on a daily basis they often face the question of what should be protected for future generations salvaged in the face of impending destruction or allowed to be destroyed without record frequently their assessments are at odds with segments of society whose culturally conditioned values conflict with the practical management of resources the book addresses such topical issues as public controversy over national memorials land ownership repatriation and the protection of cultural heritage in war and peace it sets the concerns of native peoples and minorities in the context of worldwide tensions between national and local identities and it explores the overt goal of many countries to promote and appreciate cultural diversity it also addresses the philosophical separation of heritage management and research within the archaeological discipline itself the contributors propose that in both developing and developed nations the theoretical underpinning of policies must be examined and new preservation protection and research strategies must be developed drawing on a broad base of international expertise the book highlights new theoretical and pragmatic approaches to archaeological value and significance being applied currently by professionals in north america europe africa south america and australia the book raises concerns of interest not only to archaeologists but also to those in law politics anthropology environmental studies and related fields it revives the critical debate concerning significance and value while emphasizing innovations in both theory and practice in what has become in the 21st century an increasingly diverse discipline clay mathers is the geographic information systems coordinator for the u s army corps of engineers in the albuquerque district new mexico he is the coeditor of trends and patterns in cultural resource significance cultural resource significance evaluation and development and decline in the mediterranean bronze age
