this book offers a deep insight into the genesis and development of the european commission's energy and climate legislation focusing on the interplay of politics and science how does the commission react when confronted with knowledge according to the author the commission functions as catalyst transforming knowledge into politics

The European Commission's Energy and Climate Policy 2014-05-07

this second and fully revised edition brings together some of the most influential work on the theory and practice of contemporary eu environmental policy comprising five comprehensive parts it includes in depth case studies of contemporary policy issues such as climate change genetically modified organisms and trans atlantic relations as well as an assessment of how well the eu is responding to new challenges such as enlargement environmental policy integration and sustainability the book's aim is to look forward and ask whether the eu is prepared or even able to respond to the new governance challenges posed by the perceived need to use new policy instruments and processes to mainstream environmental thinking in all eu policy sectors

EU Focus on Climate Change 2002

europa's energy state aid guidelines no longer reflect the market reality and need to be carefully revised this study looks at the existing rules and provides recommendations for the revised guidelines to effectively contribute to accelerating the decarbonisation of europa's economy it calls on the european commission to pursue a combined approach that looks at reinforcing both common objectives and specific state aid measures since the approval of the latest guidelines for state aid for energy and environmental protection eea in 2014 the eu institutions have agreed to accelerate the decarbonisation process to reach a climate neutral economy by 2050 this strong impetus heavily influences the energy market where we see new economic models and types of actors emerging and where there has been significant technological progress over the past years the energy and environmental protection state aid guidelines no longer reflect the market's reality and need to be revised carefully as brussels is about to kick off the revision of the eea this report provides recommendations for new rules that effectively contribute to fast tracking the transition towards low carbon energy systems in a cost efficient way above all brussels should align the new rules with its

2030 climate and energy transition targets the eea reform should combine approaches that look both at common objectives and specific aid measures this requires a significant evolution of the current regime whilst ensuring smooth continuity defining clear criteria to assess the contribution of a specific state aid measure to the common interest is of utmost importance the revised eea should strengthen these assessment criteria including for specific aid measures they must promote technology neutrality and consider the energy system's resilience among the assessment criteria the application of the proportionality test should be improved catherine banet author of the report the guidelines are part of a bigger ecosystem of rules the eea work in close interaction with the general block exemption regulation gber which allows the commission to exempt prior state aid notification and approval in specific cases this has proven to be efficient and should be maintained if during the review a different approach is chosen it may impact the entire architecture of the hard and soft law ecosystem of the eu state aid regime the clean energy package for all europeans is a driver of the reflection behind the revision of the guidelines the scope of application of the eea should reflect and build upon the provisions laid down in this package at the same time the new guidelines have the challenging task of anticipating the impacts of moving climate targets from the european green deal and the upcoming rules to achieve them such as the revised renewable energy directive the revised alternative fuels infrastructure directive the implementation of the sector integration strategy and the hydrogen strategy finally enforcing the rules is just as important as setting the right rules the report notes that on several occasions in its recent case law the court of justice of the eu has reversed some of the european commission's approval decisions with major impacts on markets the revised guidelines should be set and applied so as to eliminate the risk of reversals of the commission's decisions as much as possible the covid 19 crisis is just one example of the deep uncertainties and changes our society is going through europe should be prepared for more disruption we need to build a more resilient energy system that can cope with such unexpected external shocks the energy state aid guidelines should be an integral part of a long term sustainable recovery roadmap catherine banet author of the report

Environmental Policy in the EU 2012-11-12 this book comments on fifty key judgments which the court of justice and the court of first instance have given on european community environmental law for each judgment the facts and procedures are described followed by an extract of the essential parts of the judgment and a commentary which places the judgment in its legal environmental and political context and develops the lines of reasoning of the court the fifty cases selected cover all substantive and procedural aspects of community environmental law as regards the provisions of the ec treaty cases 1 to 9 horizontal problems cases 10 to 18 water and air cases 19 to 25 products and noise cases 26 to 32 nature protection cases 33 to 38 waste management cases 39 to 45 and procedural questions cases 46 to 50 particular emphasis is laid on commenting on recent judgments thus the oldest case discussed dates from 1991 and 43 of the 50 judgments date from 1996 or later the book provides a clear insight into the jurisdiction of the european courts it will be of particular use to practitioners of national and community environmental law researchers law students and administrators it is written in a comprehensible style which also makes it a useful tool for non lawyers who deal with european community environmental law and policy how institutional conflicts arise in international political orders and the conditions shaping the outcomes of such conflicts has become the object of considerable contemporary focus this book considers the dynamics of institutional conflict and institutional change in international organizations specifically focusing on the european union the most highly integrated international political order on the globe in a world where political decision making increasingly takes place above the nation state level it theorises the social mechanisms that lead to the point at which these tensions become explicit and the customary functioning of international political orders tips into outright conflict between different organizational entities taking a constructivist approach it examines two in depth case studies in the field of justice and home affairs jha and the eu s common foreign and security policy cfsp to explain the dynamics of the processes that lead up to institutional conflicts and provide some explanation for their final outcomes this text will be of key interest to fields of

Casebook on EU Environmental Law 2002-08-30 all policy systems are struggling to respond to wicked policy problems like international terrorism drug crime and unsustainable development none more so than the european union eu which is renowned for its fluidity deeply sectorized structures and weak political leadership as the traditional mode of coordinating essentially issuing regulation no longer commands sufficient political support the eu has turned to what are increasingly termed soft or new modes of governance which rely upon different actors working together in relatively non hierarchical networks new modes of governance are in vogue because they appear to provide the eu with a new way to add value to national level activities without the slow and process of agreeing new legislation or the cost associated with building new administrative capacities in brussels this analysis provides the first book length account of how effective network based modes are at addressing problems that simultaneously demand greater levels of horizontal and vertical coordination taking as an example the thirty year struggle to build environmental thinking into all areas and levels of eu policy making it systematically explores the steps that two major eu institutions the european commission and the european parliament and three member states germany the netherlands and the uk have not taken to build effective networked governance by blending state of the art theories with new empirical findings it offers a stark reminder that networked governance is not and has never been a panacea coordinating networks do not spontaneously self organise in the eu they have to be carefully designed as part of a repertoire of different coordinating instruments the book concludes that the eu urgently needs to devote more of its time to the more mundane but important task of auditing and managing network which paradoxically is an exercise in hierarchy in so doing this book helps to strip away some of the rhetorical claims made about the novelty and appeal of new modes to reveal a much more sober and realistic appraisal of their coordinating potential the new edition of this essential book details the present state of eu environmental law as it has developed over the last 50 years the author was personally involved in its making and enforcement having worked for more than 30 years in the environmental department of the european commission the book therefore provides unique insights into this complex field the book discusses in detail governance and other horizontal issues such as competence questions the division of power between the eu and its member states the individual right to a clean environment and the integration of environmental requirements into other eu policies such as energy transport agriculture fisheries trade and tourism new chapters elaborate on the relationship between uk and eu law after brexit written by christopher badger and on the global effect of eu environmental law and policy other chapters deal with climate change biodiversity water protection air and noise pollution products and waste implementation of eu law in the member states and the prominent role of the eu court of justice with its more than 1 100 environmental judgments are discussed as well as an overall assessment of eu law and policy in environmental matters and its perspectives to 2030 under the 8th eu environmental action programme at a time of globalisation the book is indispensable reading for students researchers and practising lawyers alike

Innovation in Environmental Policy? 2009-01-01 integrating environmental policies into the policies of all other sectors is the core european environmental policy but there has been no thorough investigation of the political process involved this volume provides the first it analyses the process of policy integration the greening of public policy across the relevant sectors and countries it finds significant variation from sector to sector and from country to country and analyses the reasons for this surprisingly the uk traditionally the dirty man of europe is far more actively engaged than environmental progressives such as germany identifying the obstacles to integration and offers solutions for policy implementation decision making and implementation at the relevant political levels

The Mechanisms of Institutional Conflict in the European Union 2016-07-15 the european and american economies are closely interlinked as mutually important investment and trading partners the growing intensity of economic interdependence has spurred the transatlantic coordination of rules and standards that can lead to the formation of non tariff barriers to transatlantic commerce but despite impressive government to government efforts to eliminate market barriers the e u and the u s have frequently clashed over each other s regulatory policies the aim of this book is to explore the domestic sources of cooperation or conflict in transatlantic regulation the book analyses the role of domestic factors through three theoretical lenses that are well established in the study of multilevel systems the principal agent approach the two level game metaphor and through a wider concept of institutionalism which emphasises the links between societal interests and regulatory ideas with institutional frameworks the book states that domestic factors embody more obstacles than opportunities for horizontal coordination it is argued that transatlantic relations will likely undergo a double movement of being simultaneously shifted upwards to become part of the global governance architecture and downwards towards broader involvement of legislators in regulatory matters hence transatlantic regulation might in the near future be shaped more by political leaders rent seeking interest groups and legislators than by networks of technocrats this book was published as a special issue of the review of international political economy
