Jocasta's nineteen years of peaceful existence in a little village of the kingdom of Ontur blew up in pieces without much warning. Grandmother had a secret, an old pact with a mysterious man, a pact that apparently Jo and her new tagalongs, a flamboyant mage, a goofball knight, a pledge, and a young alchemist now had to take care of. Thanks to the untimely death of the king of Ontur, a quest to find an ancient place concealing an artifact of unmeasurable power and rumored to be deadly and posthaste before it falls into the wrong hands that's something all grandmothers ask of their granddaughters sometime in their lifetime. Right and all that was at stake was the stability of the kingdom, no pressure set in a world where magic is vital, where mages are as equally feared and shunned as they're needed.

First published in 1982, Means and Ends in Education explores the contrasts between approaches to teaching where teaching is simply a means to some other end, approaches in which the end determines the means, and approaches in which means and ends are integrated and education serves an intrinsic purpose. The book considers the concept of education and evaluates different processes and techniques of teaching and learning, divided into three parts: it covers instrumentalist approaches, learner-oriented approaches, and liberal approaches to education. It puts forward differing views as to what the term education means to different professions and in different contexts and how different approaches result in a very different experience for the recipient. It also discusses the extent to which an evaluation of methods of education and an evaluation of the aims of education are linked. Means and Ends in Education will appeal to those with an interest in the philosophy of education.

roger ebert has been writing film reviews for the chicago sun times for over four decades now and his biweekly essays on great movies have been appearing there since 1996 as ebert noted in the introduction to the first collection of those pieces they are not the greatest films of all time because all lists of great movies are a foolish attempt to codify works which must stand alone but it s fair to say if you want to take a tour of the landmarks of the first century of cinema start here enter the great movies iii ebert s third collection of essays on the crème de la crème of the silver screen each one a model of critical appreciation and a blend of love and analysis that will send readers back to the films with a fresh set of eyes and renewed enthusiasm or maybe even lead to a first time viewing from the godfather part ii to groundhog day from the last picture show to last tango in paris the hundred pieces gathered here display a welcome balance between the familiar and the esoteric spanning hollywood blockbusters and hidden gems independent works and foreign language films alike each essay draws on ebert s vast knowledge of the cinema its fascinating history and its breadth of techniques introducing newcomers to some of the most exceptional movies ever made while revealing new insights to connoisseurs as well named the most powerful pundit in america by forbes magazine and a winner of the pulitzer prize roger ebert is inarguably the most prominent and influential authority on the cinema today the great movies iii is sure to please his many fans and further enhance his reputation as america s most respected and trusted film critic

this groundbreaking book redefines human learning by placing sensation and experience at its core the book delves into the essence of what it means to be human and how humans best learn and flourish drawing on insights from evolutionary biology neuroscience learning science and the arts the authors weave together a rich tapestry of ideas that challenge traditional approaches to education the authors argue that school and educational research often ignore fundamental aspects of human learning such as empathy intuition and balance by examining what experience really means when we say humans learn from experience the authors propose a more holistic approach to education much of which goes on outside school that goes beyond talk texts and analytical reasoning with examples from various media particularly the wildly popular japanese anime series attack on titan the authors treat good teaching as experience design and show how experience can be a powerful force for learning and human flourishing as our world faces unprecedented challenges and crises this timely book serves as a clarion call for a transformative approach to teaching and learning that respects the nature of humans as distinctive sorts of creatures urging us to create environments that nurture the full spectrum of human capacities

David Plante's dazzling portraits of three influential women in the literary world now back in print for the first time in decades Difficult Women presents portraits of three extraordinary complicated and yes difficult women while also raising intriguing and in their own way difficult questions about the character and motivations of the keenly and often cruelly observant portraitist himself the book begins with David Plante's portrait of Jean Rhys in her old age when the publication of the Wide Sargasso Sea after years of silence that had made Rhys's great novels of the 1920s and 30s as good as unknown had at last gained genuine recognition for her Rhys however can hardly be said to be enjoying her new fame a terminal alcoholic she curses and staggers and rants like King Lear on the heath in the hotel room that she has made her home while Plante looks impassively on Sonia Orwell is his second subject a suave exploiter and hapless victim of her beauty and social prowess while the unflappable brilliant and impossibly opinionated Germaine Greer sails through the final pages ever ready to set the world and any erring companion right
