taking care established the author as an important social and political analyst whose background happened to be in clinical psychology in this work the author develops the analysis of mental illness and psychology in general in the contexts of society power and interest people's experience is embodied in the world in which they exist notwithstanding the claims of some psychology cannot in the same way that magic cannot change the nature of that experience fundamentally at best psychotherapy might provide a degree of understanding about that limitation the historical relationship between psychology and magic is examined the socio-political and economic structures of the society in which we live have the greatest influence on mental health as on many other matters therefore the individuation of focus in psychology on personal relationships happiness and sexuality can significantly miss the point we need to develop political and social structures that take care of people to enable them to have meaningful public lives this book traces the notion of care and civic values in education that are largely devalued today by neoliberal economic concerns through a discussion of educators and philosophers including arendt foucault guattari patocka simondon stengers and whitehead atkinson explores the gift of otherness in relation to an ethico politics of pedagogic practice and learning including art education he argues for pedagogical practices that facilitate and support each learner s pathways through what is called a pedagogy of taking care this involves paying due attention with empathy to each learner s pathway of learning and to the difference and divergence of such pathways it also requires the teacher to take care to be vigilant towards their own pedagogical frameworks that inform pedagogical work particularly when a student or child produces work that does not accord with such frameworks atkinson not only critiques current educational policy but advocates possible futures of being not dominated by the neoliberal tools of force and power pedagogies of taking care allow us to think differently about education and art education and reevaluate it s meaning within research classrooms non formal contexts of education and cultural institutions
