Reflections on Human Development

1995-08-17

this work explores a new development paradigm whose central focus is on human well being increase in income is treated as an essential means but not as the end of development and certainly not as the sum of human life development policies and strategies are discussed which link economic growth with human lives in various societies the book also analyzes the evolution of a new human development index which is a far more comprehensive measure of socio economic progress of nations than the traditional measure of gross national product for the first time a political freedom index is also presented the book offers a new vision of human security for the twenty first century where real security is equated with security of people in their homes their jobs their communities and their environment the book discusses many concrete proposals in this context including a global compact to overcome the worst aspects of global poverty within a decade key reforms in the bretton woods institutions of world bank and imf and establishment of a new economic security council within the united nations intended as supplemental reading in courses on theories of development this book augments traditional core texts by providing students with more depth on about two dozen recent and emerging theories that have appeared over the past 20 years this period has seen a decline of the traditional grand theories that attempt to apply to all people all the time in favor of micro theories that focus more on individual differences so a book like this actually points the way toward the future rather than dryly reviewing the past in addition the author inspects the changing ways in which the concept of theory itself has been interpreted during this period and he concludes with a chapter suggesting future directions

Recent Theories of Human Development

this book provides a timely and accessible introduction to the foundational ideas associated with the human development school of thought it examines its conceptual evolution during the post colonial era and discusses how various institutions of the un system have tried to engage with this issue both in terms of intellectual and technical advance and operationally showing that human development has had a profound impact on shaping the policy agenda and programming priorities of global institutions it argues that human development has helped to preserve the continued vitality of major multilateral development programs funds and agencies it also details how human development faces new risks and threats caused by political economic social and environmental forces which are highlighted in a series of engaging case studies on trade water energy the environment democracy human rights and peacebuilding the book also makes the case for why human development remains relevant in an increasingly globalized world while asking whether global institutions will be able to sustain political and moral support from their member states and powerful non state actors it argues that fresh new perspectives on human development are now urgently needed to fill critical gaps across borders and entire regions a positive forward looking agenda for the future of global governance would have to engage with new issues such as the sustainable development goals energy transitions resource scarcity and expansion of democratic governance within and between nations redefining the overall nature and specific characteristics of what constitutes human progress in an increasingly integrated and interdependent world this book serves as a primer for scholars and graduate students of international relations and development it is also relevant to scholars of economics political science history sociology and women s studies what is the ultimate goal of any human society there have been many answers to this question but by producing a series of notably well structured arguments economist mahbub ul haq s reflections on human development persuaded readers that the goal should be defined quite simply as the requirement that each society improve the lives of its citizens if this is the agreed aim haq continues then economic development should be designed to support human development his well structured reasoning helped development economists recalibrate much of what had previously been regarded as self evident that economic productivity was the main barometer of social well being the work had a profound effect and haq

s thinking helped produce a new understanding of what development actually meant haq conscientiously mapped out arguments and counter arguments to persuade readers that development did not simply mean an increase in productivity but rather an increase in human development the capability of people to live the lives they want to by bringing the abstract back to the concrete haq reevaluated the neoliberal reasoning that suggested economic development necessarily benefitted everybody and by virtue of his strong command of reasoning haq showed how economic development provided no guarantees that rich people would spend money on improving health education or other human development outcomes for the poor three year old kwara ae children in oceania act as caregivers of their younger siblings but in the uk it is an offense to leave a child under age 14 ears without adult supervision in the efe community in zaire infants routinely use machetes with safety and some skill although u s middle class adults often do not trust young children with knives what explains these marked differences in the capabilities of these children until recently traditional understandings of human development held that a child s development is universal and that children have characteristics and skills that develop independently of cultural processes barbara rogooff argues however that human development must be understood as a cultural process not simply a biological or psychological one individuals develop as members of a community and their development can only be fully understood by examining the practices and circumstances of their communities this book provides a critical deconstruction of the human development framework promoted by the united nations development programme undp since 1990 taking the human development reports of the undp as its starting point for reflection this book investigates the construction of this framework as well as its political function since the end of the cold war the book argues that the undp s discourse on development relies on essentialist philosophical cultural and political assumptions dating back to the 19th century and concludes that these assumptions also present in the mdgs and sdgs impede a full grasp of the complex and multi layered global problems of the current world whilst development critiques traditionally relied on liberal marxist or foucauldian theoretical frameworks and focused on epistemological or political economy issues this book draws on the post foundational and post structuralist work of ernesto laclau and jacques derrida and proposes an ontological and relational reading of development discourses that both complements and further develops the insights of previous critiques this book is key reading for advanced students and researchers of critical development studies political science the un and sustainable development

An Introduction to the Human Development and Capability Approach

this book begins with a discussion of the human life cycle and then uses that discussion and other ideas to paint a general picture of what human lives are like while the first part looks at human development and change the second part of the book explores what all human lives are like philosophical ideas and methods are central to this book although it is difficult to subcategorize it into any familiar subdiscipline of philosophy it draws on modern concepts from psychology and social science in order to portray an image of human life and lives and to enable readers to easily understand the notion of human development in a very specific and directed way although cognitive development and the development of motor skills are two examples of forms of human development this book homes in on a particular and arguably more synoptic way of seeing our development which is in relation to and occurs within the human life cycle this book is an enlightening read for a broad range of philosophy scholars articulating and defending a view that is neither as pessimistic nor as optimistic about human life as previous views have been

if a country s gross domestic product increases each year but so does the percentage of its people deprived of basic education health care and other opportunities is that country really making progress if we rely on conventional economic indicators can we ever grasp how the world s billions of individuals are really managing in this powerful critique martha nussbaum argues that our dominant theories of development have given us policies that ignore our most basic human needs for dignity and self respect for the past twenty five years nussbaum has been working on an alternate model to assess human development the capabilities approach she and her colleagues begin with the simplest of questions what is each person actually able to do and to be what real opportunities are available to them the capabilities approach to human progress has until now been expounded only in specialized works creating capabilities however affords anyone interested in issues of human development a wonderfully lucid account of the structure and practical implications of an alternate model it demonstrates a path to justice for both humans and nonhumans weighs its relevance against other philosophical stances and reveals the value of its universal guidelines even as it acknowledges cultural difference in our era of unjustifiable inequity nussbaum shows how by attending to the narratives of individuals and grasping the daily impact of policy we can enable people everywhere to live full and creative lives this book is an extension of the authors earlier books titled human development in aotearoa bird and drewery 2000 drewery and bird 2004 the title has changed to emphasise the interlinking concerns of family place and culture for human lives across time though the authors are still writing from their home in aotearoa new zealand in this edition they explore the journeys through life for people around the world and hope that this approach will be useful for professionals and students in new zealand as well as for people in other countries who may be interested in following and analyzing the same perspective on human development the authors achieve this by centring their studies in aotearoa while at the same time acknowledging that development occurs in a global setting in this book international concerns about human development are considered while also holding on to the importance of lived worlds of our specific locations considering place does not mean that this title pays attention to only one location as the book was being written the authors considered family place and culture as complex and movable aspects of human identity this edition embraces more contemporary questions that have developmental implications and psychology sociology history anthropology cultural studies biology demography and economic development studies are considered in order to create a picture of the way we humans live today in a complex constantly changing world
