Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject Politics, International Politics, Topic Development, Politics, Grade Distinction, University of Manchester, Institute for Development Policy and Management, Course Perspectives on Development, Language English, Abstract. In the mid-1980s, development studies experienced a crisis, the often-called impasse of development theory and policy (Schuurmann, 1993). The reasons can be found on the level of development thinking and of real-world changes and problems. Simon (2003, 6) development thinking got stuck in a cul-de-sac as both grand meta-narratives of development, the 'ory' modernisation theory and radical Marxist approaches, lost their hegemony. Radical alternative theories based on Marxist and neo-Marxist political economy were discredited by the collapse of socialism. Modernisation theory based in neoclassical economics did not seem to deliver many benefits as economic growth turned out to produce more ecological, social, and economical problems than it solved. Ibid. It became clear that growth and the neo-liberal agenda with its structural adjustment programs in the 1980s and 1990s was not necessarily connected to other development goals like employment creation, reduction of inequality and poverty, or the provision of basic needs. The acceleration of globalisation and with it the questioning of the nation-state as a trusted point of reference schuurman 2000 7 of development studies intensified the crisis of development theory moreover new theoretical approaches like feminism post modernism and post colonialism and the growing recognition of heterogeneity of the third world challenged development studies and theory even more schuurman 1993 there have been two major reactions to the impasse of development theory and policy the first reaction was the search for development alternatives with the intention of reforming and redefining the goals of development the second reaction post intended as supplemental reading in courses on theories of development this book augments traditional core texts by providing students with more depth on about two dozen recent and emerging theories that have appeared over the past 20 years this period has seen a decline of the traditional grand theories that attempt to apply to all people all the time in favor of micro theories that focus more on individual differences so a book like this actually points the way toward the future rather than dryly reviewing the past in addition the author inspects the changing ways in which the concept of theory itself has been interpreted during this period and he concludes with a chapter suggesting future directions
