this bracing collection marks the first appearance in english of the polish poet janusz szuber hailed as the greatest discovery in polish poetry of the late twentieth century when in his late forties he began publishing the work he d been producing for almost thirty years nobel laureate wislawa szymborska has called him a superb poet and zbigniew herbert said that his poetry speaks to the hard part of the soul szuber is an intensely elegant writer whose poems are short and accessible his work is poised between the rigors of making poetry and life itself in all its messy glory between the devastations of history and the quiet act of observing our place in it all grammar is my adopted country szuber explains in one poem yearning at the same time toward the physical the breathing world i d prefer something less ambiguous the bony parachutes of leaves the flame of goosefoot from a frosty page a star bent over me throughout there is an intense quiet and modesty to szuber s verse whether he is observing the heron in flight the froth of blossoming apple trees or the human images in an old photo album who will carve her fragile profile in ivory who in truthful verse will briefly tell of eternity impermanent as a broken fan in lovely astute translations by ewa hryniewicz yarbrough the poems in they carry a promise are an exhilarating introduction to the work of a contemporary polish master
