Practical Electricity 2015-06-12

excerpt from practical electricity with questions and answers in march 1896 the armature winder made its first appearance its attractive feature being the commencement of a series of lectures on designing dynamos and motors these lectures being written from daily shop practice and made comprehensible by questions and their subsequent answers as each paper with its lecture made its appearance the interest manifested by readers became more pronounced until we were flooded with inquiries for numbers which the various readers had missed as we had only reserved a very few papers of each issue our ability to supply the back numbers was limited we consequently decided to print the lectures in book form and so notified our readers of this decision with the result that orders for the book came in in quantities which were beyond anything we had anticipated this evidence of the popularity of our efforts encouraged us in compiling a work much more extensive and valuable than had at first been our intention in order to accomplish this we felt the necessity of associating with us a man of greater technical knowledge than we ourselves possessed so that the work might be thoroughly criticised and enlarged we selected mr john c lincoln an electrical engineer of national reputation who has contributed articles to this book covering matters of great interest and so far as we have been able to learn ideas never before appearing in print we are obligated to mr c e f ahlm for assistance rendered in preparing the chapter on electric automobiles about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
