recommendations in the nrc guide with the ratification of a new constitution in december 1906 iran embarked on a great movement of systemic and institutional change which along with the introduction of new ideas was to be one of the most abiding legacies of the first iranian revolution known as the constitutional revolution this uprising was significant not only for introducing secular understandings of government but also islamic visions of what could constitute a national assembly the events of the constitutional revolution in tehran have been much discussed but the provinces despite their crucial role in the revolution have received less attention here vanessa martin seeks to redress this imbalance she does so by firstly analysing the role of the islamic debate in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and its relationship with secular ideas and secondly by examining the ramifications of this debate in the main cities of tabriz shiraz isfahan and bushehr when muzaffar al din shah came to power in 1896 on the assassination of his father nasr al din shah iran was in the midst of social and political upheaval which culminated in the creation for the first time in iran s history of a constitution and a new majlis consultative assembly in this book martin looks in particular at the idea of modern islamic government as it was conceptualized at the time an idea which had been emerging for some time before the revolution having its origins in the vision of the reformist pan islamist jamal al din al afghani she therefore traces the evolution of the debate around whether iran was to be a secular or an islamic society or a combination of the two together with the implications of this discourse in terms of popular perception and public opinion by looking at the revolution outside of tehran she highlights the intra elite rivalries and the islamic response to the constitutional revolution from the moderate views of thiqat al islam to the emergence of islamic organizations and militancy it is through this examination of iran s major provincial cities that martin concludes that in each region the constitutional revolution took on a character of its own from an exploration of the elites of shiraz including the effective mayor qavam al mulk to the power centre of the then governor of isfahan prince zill al sultan and from the revolutionary fervor of tabriz to the commercial centre of bushehr martin sheds light on the historical political religious and geographical importance of these cities by examining the interaction between islam and secularism during this tumultuous time iran between islamic nationalism and secularism offers a vital new approach to the understanding of a key moment in iran s history now in its second edition how to read texts introduces students to key critical approaches to literary texts and offers a practical introduction for students developing their own critical and close reading skills written in a lively jargon free style it explains critical concepts approaches and ideas including debates around critical theory the role of history and context the links between creativity and criticism the relationship between author reader and text the new edition now includes guidance on analysing a range of multi media texts including film and online media as well as the purely literary in addition to new practical examples readings exercises and checkpoints that help students to build confidence in their own critical readings of both primary and secondary texts the book now also offers guidance on writing fully formed critical essays and tips for independent research comprehensively updated and revised throughout how to read texts is an indispensable guide for students making the transition to university study a history of the muslim brotherhood in egypt based on first person interviews with brotherhood rank and file members the routledge handbook of english language studies provides a comprehensive overview of english language studies the book takes a three pronged approach to examine what constitutes the phenomenon of the english language why and in what contexts it is an important subject to study and what the chief methodologies are that are used to study it in 30 chapters written by leading scholars from around the world this handbook covers and critically examines english language studies as a discipline that is changing and evolving in response to local and global pressures definitions of english including world englishes contact englishes and historical and colonial perspectives the relevance of english in areas such as teaching politics and the media analysis of english situated in wider linguistics contexts including psycholinguistics sociolinguistics and linguistic ethnography the routledge handbook of english language studies is essential reading for researchers and students working in fields related to the teaching and study of the english language in any context

Iran between Islamic Nationalism and Secularism 2013-09-16 with the ratification of a new constitution in december 1906 iran embarked on a great movement of systemic and institutional change which along with the introduction of new ideas was to be one of the most abiding legacies of the first iranian revolution known as the constitutional revolution this uprising was significant not only for introducing secular understandings of government but also islamic visions of what could constitute a national assembly the events of the constitutional revolution in tehran have been much discussed but the provinces despite their crucial role in the revolution have received less attention here vanessa martin seeks to redress this imbalance she does so by firstly analysing the role of the islamic debate in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and its relationship with secular ideas and secondly by examining the ramifications of this debate in the main cities of tabriz shiraz isfahan and bushehr when muzaffar al din shah came to power in 1896 on the assassination of his father nasr al din shah iran was in the midst of social and political upheaval which culminated in the creation for the first time in iran s history of a constitution and a new majlis consultative assembly in this book martin looks in particular at the idea of modern islamic government as it was conceptualized at the time an idea which had been emerging for some time before the revolution having its origins in the vision of the reformist pan islamist jamal al din al afghani she therefore traces the evolution of the debate around whether iran was to be a secular or an islamic society or a combination of the two together with the implications of this discourse in terms of popular perception and public opinion by looking at the revolution outside of tehran she highlights the intra elite rivalries and the islamic response to the constitutional revolution from the moderate views of thiqat al islam to the emergence of islamic organizations and militancy it is through this examination of iran s major provincial cities that martin concludes that in each region the constitutional revolution took on a character of its own from an exploration of the elites of shiraz including the effective mayor qavam al mulk to the power centre of the then governor of isfahan prince zill al sultan and from the revolutionary fervor of tabriz to the commercial centre of bushehr martin sheds light on the historical political religious and geographical importance of these cities by examining the interaction between islam and secularism during this tumultuous time iran between islamic nationalism and secularism offers a vital new approach to the understanding of a key moment in iran s history
