Diverging Time 2013-03 temporal divergence creates a need for new narratives and paradigms in diverging time david carvounas supports this assertion through detailed expository and diagnostic readings of kant hegel and marx he focuses on their contribution to our understanding of modernity as an epochal shift in the relationship between past and future recasting the significance of the past and future of the modern present despite their different solutions to the problem of temporal coordination they urged the modern world to look not to the past but to the newly opened future for continuity meaning and purpose this book not only offers a fresh look at a defining characteristic of modernity but also makes a compelling case that a coherent modern temporal structure requires a sustainable orientation toward the future an orientation that kant hegel and marx delineate in distinctive and powerful ways

An End-Time Church Manifesto 2016-10-05 both the wine and the wineskin are equally critical to the church in order to provide the corporate delivery system which will be required at the end of the age therefore i would submit that the church of the 21st century is in desperate need of a restoration to become the instrument which was is and will be required by god to accomplish his purposes in the last days yes it is incumbent upon the church to gain the necessary insight from the scriptures in order to fulfill her prophetic calling to the jew during the time of jacob s trouble but that is the conceptual part of the whole counsel of god at some point the time comes when we are brought to the place where we should be compelled to say ok i get it now brethren what must we do indeed what must we do this little book attempts to address this all important question

The New York Times Current History 1916 part time for all offers solutions to 4 pressing problems inequality for care givers family stress from demands of work and care chronic time scarcity policy makers who are ignorant of care and care givers with little access to policy making the care policy divide only a radical restructuring of both work and care can redress all these problems we propose new norms no one does paid work for more than 30 hours a week and everyone contributes roughly 22 hours of unpaid care to family friends or their chosen community of care other approaches provide only partial solutions for example wages for housework or excellent daycare or flexible work hours would not overcome the care policy divide we explain why everyone needs to acquire the knowledge and dispositions that come from the sustained experience of providing care throughout one s life we show how work can be transformed to allow time for care giving and how these new norms will generate a cultural shift in the value accorded care while we focus primarily on human to human care we include care for the earth the final two chapters describe how these processes of transformation could be feasibly accomplished and why these changes are possible in high income countries within our current global economy every one of our proposals already exists in at least one country the task is to integrate the key reforms and scale them up given the magnitude of the current problems deep changes are needed part time for all offers a feasible path forward
