this ambitious survey draws together the two major wars of decolonization fought by france in indochina and algeria as well as the lesser but far from insignificant military operations in madagascar tunisia and morocco into a single integrated account it examines traditional french attitudes to empire and how these changed under the pressure of events the military operations themselves the collapse of the fourth republic and the return of de gaulle and the final drama of french withdrawal from algeria and the ethnic cleansing of its european settler population

the fourth year began with intensified fighting on Guadalcanal in the southern Solomon Islands in September 1942 the United States had launched their fight back in the Pacific when they landed there the previous month in the western hemisphere the USA threw its almighty weight into the fight against Hitler's Germany with the Operation Torch landings in North Africa the Americans had boots on the ground hitherto in the war the Axis had largely been the controllers of events now as often as not they had to react to occurrences under a continuous rain of blows Montgomery had masterminded a tactical success at El Alamein in November 1942 Rommel had retreated to face an allied invasion of Tunisia and defeat of all Axis forces on that continent this was followed in Russia by Hitler losing an entire army at Stalingrad when the starving survivors surrendered in January 1943 then the Allies invaded Sicily triggering the ousting of Italy's dictator Mussolini from power further concern for the German Führer came with the first daylight bombing raid by the USAF at the end of January 1943 it was followed by the RAF successfully breaching two dams in the Ruhr valley in a precision night raid those events heralded round the clock bombing of Germany by day and night on the eastern front in the summer Hitler gambled one final strategic offensive at Kursk and suffered a decisive defeat never again to regain the initiative or launch a major offensive in Russia by the end of the fourth year of the war the Allies dominated the vital Atlantic seaways upon which future allied strategy was entirely dependent although the German submarine menace still existed

Engineer Memoirs: Lieutenant General Arthur G. Trudeau, USA, Retired 2009-08-27 who is the enemy this is the question most asked in modern warfare gone are the set piece conventional battles of the past once seen as secondary to more traditional conflicts irregular warfare as modified and refashioned since the 1990s now presents a major challenge to the state and the bureaucratic institutions which have dominated the twentieth century and to the politicians and civil servants who formulate policy twenty first century conflict is dominated by counterinsurgency operations where the enemy is almost indistinguishable from innocent civilians battles are gunfights in jungles deserts and streets winning hearts and minds is as important as holding territory from struggles in south africa the philippines and ireland to operations in iraq afghanistan and chechnya this book covers the strategy and doctrine of counterinsurgency and the factors which ensure whether such operations are successful or not recent ignorance of central principles and the emergence of social media which has shifted the odds in favour of the insurgent have too often resulted in failure leaving governments and their security forces embedded in a hostile population immersed in costly and dangerous nation building
