the monograph series oxford studies in medieval literature and culture showcases the plurilingual and multicultural quality of medieval literature and actively seeks to promote research that not only focuses on the array of subjects medievalists now pursue in literature theology and philosophy in social political jurisprudential and intellectual history the history of art and the history of science but also that combines these subjects productively it offers innovative studies on topics that may include but are not limited to manuscript and book history languages and literatures of the global middle ages race and the post colonial the digital humanities media and performance music medicine the history of affect and the emotions the literature and practices of devotion the theory and history of gender and sexuality ecocriticism and the environment theories of aesthetics medievalism reading for form can mean reading for formation understanding processes through which a text was created can help us in characterizing its form but what is involved in bringing a diachronic process to bear upon a synchronic work when does literary formation begin and end when does form happen these questions emerge with urgency in the interactions between english poet geoffrey chaucer and italian trecento authors dante alighieri giovanni boccaccio and francis petrararch in fourteenth century italy new ways were emerging of configuring the relation between author and reader previously medieval reading was often oriented around the significance of the text to the individual reader in italy however reading was beginning to be understood as a way of getting back to a work s initial formation this book tracks how concepts of reading developed within italian texts including dante s vita nova boccaccio s filostrato and teseida and petrararch s seniles impress themselves upon chaucer s troilus and criseyde and canterbury tales it argues that chaucer s poetry reveals the implications of reading for formation above all that it both depends upon and effaces the historical perspective and temporal experience of the individual reader problems raised within Chaucer's poetry thus inform this book's broader methodological argument that there is no one moment at which the formation of Chaucer's poetry ends rather its form emerges in and through process of reading within time imagining the woman reader in the age of dante brings to light a new character in medieval literature that of the woman reader and interlocutor it does so by establishing a dialogue between literary studies gender studies the history of literacy and the material culture of the book in medieval times from guittone d arezzo s piercing critic the villainous woman to the mysterious lady who bids guido cavalcanti to write his grand philosophical song to dante s female co editors in the vita nova and his great characters of female readers such as francesca and beatrice in the comedy all the way to boccaccio s overtly female audience this particular interlocutor appears to be central to the construct of textuality and the construction of literary authority this volume explores the figure of the woman reader by contextualizing her within the history of female literacy the material culture of the book and the ways in which writers and poets of earlier traditions imagined her it argues that these figures are not mere veneers between a male author and a real male readership but that although fictional they bring several advantages to their vernacular authors such as orality the mother tongue the recollection of the delights of early education literality freedom in interpretation absence of teleology the beauties of ornamentation and amplification a reduced preoccupation with the fixity of the text the pleasure of making mistakes dialogue with the other the extension of desire original simplicity and new and more flexible forms of authority the thirteenth century saw such a proliferation of new encyclopedic texts that more than one scholar has called it the century of the encyclopedias variously referred to as a speculum thesaurus or imago mundi the term encyclopedia was not commonly applied to such books until the eighteenth century these texts were organized in such a way that a reader could easily locate a collection of authoritative statements on any given topic because they reproduced rather than simply summarized parts of prior texts these compilations became libraries in miniature in this groundbreaking study mary franklin brown examines writings in latin catalan and french that are connected to the encyclopedic movement vincent of beauvais s speculum maius ramon llull s libre de meravelles arbor scientiae and arbre de filosofia d amor and jean de meun s continuation of the roman de la rose franklin brown analyzes the order of knowledge in these challenging texts describing the wide ranging interests the textual practices including commentary compilation and organization and the diverse discourses that they absorb from preexisting classical patristic and medieval writing she also demonstrates how these encyclopedias like libraries became heterotopias of knowledge spaces where many possible ways of knowing are juxtaposed but franklin brown s study will not appeal only to historians she argues that a revised understanding of late medievalism makes it possible to discern a close connection between scholasticism and contemporary imaginative literature she shows how encyclopedists employed the same practices of figuration narrative and citation as poets and romanciers while much of the difficulty of the imaginative writing of this period derives from a juxtaposition of heterogeneous discourses inspired by encyclopedias with rich and innovative readings of texts both familiar and neglected reading the world reveals how the study of encyclopedism can illuminate both the intellectual work and the imaginative writing of the scholastic age challenging the view that the fifteenth century was the drab age of english literary history seth lerer seeks to recover the late medieval literary system that defined the canon of chaucer s work and the canonical approaches to its understanding lerer shows how the poets scribes and printers of the period constructed chaucer as the poet laureate and father of english verse chaucer appears throughout the fifteenth century as an adviser to kings and master of technique and lerer reveals the patterns of subjection childishness and inability that characterize the stance of chaucer s imitators and his readers in figures from the canterbury tales such as the abused clerk the boyish squire and the infantilized narrator of the tale of sir thopas in the excuse ridden narrator of troilus and criseyde and in chaucer s cursed adam scribevyn the poet s inheritors found their oppressed personae through close readings of poetry from lydgate to skelton detailed analysis of manuscript anthologies and early printed books and inquiries into the political environments and the social contexts of bookmaking lerer charts the construction of a chaucer unassailable in rhetorical prowess and political sanction a chaucer aureate and laureate

the emotions the literature and practices of devotion the theory and history of gender and sexuality ecocriticism and the environment theories of aesthetics medievalism the arts of disruption allegory and piers plowman offers a series of new readings of the allegorical poem piers plowman but it is also a book about allegory it argues not just that there are distinctively disruptive arts that occur in allegory but that allegory because it is interested in the difficulty of making meaning is itself a disruptive art the book approaches this topic via the study of five medieval allegorical narrative structures that exploit diegetic conflict and disruption although very different they all bring together contrasting descriptions of spiritual process in order to develop new understanding and excite moral or devotional change these five structures are the paradiastolic hypocritical figure such as vices masked by being made to look like adjacent virtues personification debate violent language and gestures of apophasis narratives of bodily decline and grail romance each appears in a range of texts which the book explores along with other connected materials in medieval rhetoric logic grammar spiritual thought ethics medicine and romance iconography these allegorical narrative structures appear radically transformed in piers plowman where the poem makes further meaning out of the friction between them much of the allegorical work of the poem occurs at the points of their intersection and within the conceptual gaps that open up between them ranging across a wide variety of medieval allegorical texts the book shows from many perspectives allegory s juxtaposition of the heterogeneous and its questioning of supposed continuities
