implementation of guidelines in the health system is a major undertaking especially in developing countries an important constraint in guideline development in developing countries is that the guideline recommendations must suit local conditions and must make use of available resources this is a challenge because the health systems of developing countries have a high burden of disease and little resources therefore guidelines must rely on cost effective healthcare interventions the bacis program study was initiated to address some of these challenges in the dissemination and utilization of maternal health guidelines the bacis program was piloted and the results showed that the bacis program could assist in improving compliance of nurses with the national maternity care guidelines this is an impressive finding and step forward for maternal healthcare in developing countries developing maternal health decision support systems in developing countries discusses public health aspects of the design and implementation of clinical decision support systems in developing country contexts specifically it focuses largely on the design and evaluation of the bacis program in south africa this is supplemented with a conversation on the possible future research directions in the bacis program study along with the outlook for clinical decision support systems in developing country contexts in general this book is ideal for e health system designers and implementers managers and policymakers in the area of e health in developing countries personnel from npos and donor agencies government officials it consultants medical professionals practitioners stakeholders researchers academicians and students who are interested in how decision support systems such as bacis are being used to improve maternal health in developing countries in south african higher education the images of dysfunction are everywhere year after year often in the same set of universities the problem of routine instability seems insoluble the financial academic and reputational costs of ongoing dysfunction are high especially for those universities caught up in the never ending struggle to overcome apartheid legacies any number of explanations have been ventured including a lack of resources shortage of capacity rural location corrupt officials and endemic conflict corrupted takes a deeper look at dysfunction in an attempt to unravel the root causes in a sample of south african universities at the heart of the problem lies the vexed issue of resources or more pertinently the relationship between resources and power who gets what and why whatever else it aspires to be commonly a place of teaching learning research and public duty a university in an impoverished community is also a rich concentration of resources around which corrupt staff students and those outside of campus all vie for access taking a political economic approach jonathan jansen describes the daily struggle for institutional resources and offers accessible sensible insights he argues that the problem won't be solved through investments in capacity building alone because the combination of institutional capacity and institutional integrity contributes to serial instability in universities rather durable solutions would include the depoliticisation of university councils and appointments of academics with integrity and capacity to manage and lead these fragile institutions many of the goals of south africa's new democracy depend on the production of professionals who have not only the knowledge and skills to make our country globally competitive but also a commitment to working and living here despite numerous reforms the south african health system ten years into democracy remains divided first world private care that ranks with middle income countries internationally at the one end and at the other extreme in the rural public sector in particular conditions that are superior only to the poorest of african countries much work has been done to change medical school curricula in line with the primary health care focus of government policy and international trends towards problem based learning the student profile in medical schools is now not only more representative of the demographics of south africa but also reveals a significant increase in female students whether these students will stay in the country after graduating and serve where they are needed most remains to be seen publisher's website this book provides reflections on the butterfly effect on how turfloop brought in the age of barack obama what is the age of barack obama to paraphrase dr ineke van kessel a prominent historian at the leiden university in the netherlands the university of the north also known as turfloop played a vital role as the center of communication coordination ideological direction the engine of bringing the new south africa was university of the north we approached this book like detectives fortunately in our detective work we were not concerned with a particular agenda we were not trying to prove that a certain method of thinking was right or wrong we didn't want this book to be filled with personal opinions and biases we wanted this book to be juice and accessible to every person who reads it in whatever corner of the world we have to back up our story with facts of course and get other people to do practical analysis and later we added our own perspectives when we completed writing this book we passed it around amongst critical people spread across the globe most of them said that the book is somehow highbrow and at the same time all together lowbrow which came as a compliment a lot of people are somewhere in between we want this book to embody that because there are many people there we want them to appreciate this book this book examines the intersections between education identity formation and language in post apartheid south africa with specific attention to higher education it does so against the backdrop of the core argument that the sector plays a critical role in shaping re producing and perpetuating sectoral class sub national and national identities which in turn in the peculiar south african setting are almost invariably analogous with the historical fault lines determined and dictated by language as a marker of ethnic and racial identity the chapters in the book grapple with the nuances related to these intersections in the understanding that higher education language policies overt and or covert largely structure institutional cultures or what has been described as curriculum in higher education institutions together the chapters examine the roles played by higher education by language policies and by the intersections of these policies and ethnolinguistic identities in either constructing and perpetuating or deconstructing ethnolinguistic identities upon which the sector was founded the introductory chapter lays out the background to the entire book with an emphasis on the policy and practice perspectives on the intersections the middle chapters describe the so called white universities black universities and middle man minorities universities the final chapter maps out future directions of the discourses on language and identity formation in south africa s higher education
