when people settle in one place they often express a desire to clarify their place in the world through the creation of small self contained worlds these small worlds help orient people within the greater world by creating centers and boundaries around and within which the events of life take place one s identity is contingent on the sense of belonging to a place the creation of place and entry is a fundamental human activity enacted by all humans beginning with the archetypal children s game of creating houses for themselves under tables in boxes or out of found materials 2 small worlds take form in many shapes on many scales from individual rooms and buildings to complete communities and cultures each imaginable as a whole though connected through thresholds to larger realities the act of settling in a place was often mythologized as the creation of the world and the creation of a sacred place has principally provided the existential means for people to establish a center and thus define their place in the world 3
