this study is an exercise in the history of political perception and opinion it broke new ground in considering the decline of liberalism through the eyes of liberals themselves by concentrating on what liberal politicians said to one another and to their audience public and private a picture is built up of the frame of mind in which those responsible for guiding liberalism faced a worsening world after 1914 the coming of the first world war was a critical element in forming that frame of mind and the frame of mind was itself critical in deciding the fate of liberalism in the post war years what emerges from this study is the paradox that the liberal mind was the greatest single obstacle in the way of a liberal revival this book provides a careful historical analysis of the co evolution of educational attainment and the wage structure in the united states through the twentieth century the authors propose that the twentieth century was not only the american century but also the human capital century that is the american educational system is what made america the richest nation in the world its educational system had always been less elite than that of most european nations by 1900 the u s had begun to educate its masses at the secondary level not just in the primary schools that had remarkable success in the nineteenth century the book argues that technological change education and inequality have been involved in a kind of race during the first eight decades of the twentieth century the increase of educated workers was higher than the demand for them this had the effect of boosting income for most people and lowering inequality however the reverse has been true since about 1980 this educational slowdown was accompanied by rising inequality the authors discuss the complex reasons for this and what might be done to ameliorate it in 1900 w e b dubois prophesied that the colour line would be the key problem of the twentieth century and he later identified one of its key dynamics the new religion of whiteness that was sweeping the world whereas most historians have confined their studies of race relations to a national framework this book studies the transnational circulation of people and ideas racial knowledge and technologies that under pinned the construction of self styled white men s countries from south africa to north america and australasia marilyn lake and henry reynolds show how in the late nineteenth century and early twentieth century these countries worked in solidarity to exclude those they defined as not white actions that provoked a long international struggle for racial equality their findings make clear the centrality of struggles around mobility and sovereignty to modern formulations of both race and human rights
