The Institutions of American Democracy 2005-05-26 this volume comprises papers delivered at the sixth meeting of the conference series history of the press in the middle east which was held in nicosia cyprus from may 19 to may 23 2004 the meeting was devoted to the theme the economy as an issue in the middle eastern press

The Economy as an Issue in the Middle Eastern Press 2008 the ideal of a neutral objective press has proven in recent years to be just that an ideal but while everyone talks about the political biases and influences of the news no one has figured out whether and how the news media exert power in governing with the news timothy e cook goes far beyond the single claim that the press is not impartial to argue that the news media are in fact a political institution integral to the day to day operations of the three branches of our government the formation of the press as a political institution began in the early days of the republic when newspapers were sponsored by political parties the relationship is now so central that press offices are found wherever one turns cook demonstrates not only how the media are structured as an institution that exercises collective power but also how the role of the media has become institutionalized within the political process affecting policy and instigating rather than merely reflecting political actions cook s analysis is a powerful and fascinating guide to our age when newsmaking and governing are inseparable this is a wonderful analysis of a highly important topic tim cook is resoundingly right that we need to look at the media as political institutions and their operatives as political actors david r mayhew author of divided we govern this meticulously researched and well reasoned work proposes to take seriously a thesis which flies in the face of both journalistic lore and political myth governing with the news is an innovative contribution to our understanding of media w lance bennett author of news the politics of illusion this book should be read by journalists by mass communication faculty teaching courses in media structure or effects and journalism faculty as a supplemental text to courses in media history and media management benjamin j burns journalism mass communication quarterly

Governing with the News 1998-02-17 the question of how much freedom the press should enjoy has been debated throughout american history in 1942 an impartial commission was formed to study mass communication evaluate the performance of the media and make recommendations for possible regulation of the press this book is the general report of that commission book cover

A Free and Responsible Press 1947 this thought provoking book provides a systematic philosophically grounded reconceptualisation of press freedom and press regulation in a major departure from orthodox norms the book argues that press freedom and coercive independent press regulation are not mutually exclusive that newspapers could be made to compensate their victims through regulation without jeopardising their free speech rights that their perceived public watchdog status does not exempt them and ultimately that mandatory press regulation is not unconstitutional in doing so the book questions our most deeply held intuitive beliefs about the press and its role in society why do we say the printed press has a duty to act as a public watchdog when there is no legally enforceable apparatus by which to ensure it does why does government constantly recommend that the press regulate itself when history shows this model always fails why do victims of press malfeasance continue to suffer needlessly by deconstructing the accepted view of press freedom and mandatory regulation this book shows that both are deeply misunderstood the prevailing notion that the press must serve the public is an empty relic of victorian ideology that is both philosophically incoherent and legally unjustifiable the press is obliged to make good not do good

A Free and Regulated Press 2020-05-28 power was at the heart of franklin delano roosevelt s relationship with the media the power of the nation s chief executive to control his public messages versus the power of a free press to act as an independent watchdog over the president and the government here is a compelling study of roosevelt s consummate news management skills as a key to fdr s political artistry and leadership legacy the author explores fdr s adroit handling of the media within the classic conflict between confidentiality and openness in a democratic society she explains how roosevelt s manipulation of the press and public opinion changed as his administration s focus shifted from economic to military crises during the depression fdr s leadership mode was flexible and open seeking new answers for problems that had not responded to conventional solutions correspondingly his dealings with the media were frank and freewheeling during the perilous years of world war ii when invasion was a legitimate fear and information could be used as a weapon fdr was forced to be more secretive and less candid powerful publishers might have despised fdr but winfield shows how he bypassed them roosevelt elevated his personal relations with the working press to an unrivaled level of goodwill he also held a record number of press conferences nearly two per week during his twelve years in the white house his famed fireside chats were carefully rationed for maximum impact his press secretary steve early proved expert in promoting good press rapport winfield includes anecdotes and assessments culled from fdr s personal communications with journalists of the period from diaries and accounts of those who worked closely with fdr she also gleans insights from the 1933 45 press conference and radio transcripts journalists responses news articles memoirs letters to the white house and the era s newspapers jacket

FDR and the News Media 1990 an insightful essay which provides a perfect overview of how what has now become known as the mainstream media engages in the invention of fake news through the manipulation of events half truths total omissions and outright lies written more than a century ago and dealing with what was then the printed media the author's observations evidence and conclusions are just as applicable today as they were at the time belloc starts out by accurately describing the media as the capitalist press which contrary to its claims does not serve the public but is rather a clique of hidden manipulators who seek only two things the advancement of their ideological agendas and to sell their newspapers belloc contrasts the capitalist press with the smaller genuinely free and independent press which cannot rely on the advertising revenue which powers their larger competitors but which tends more toward the truth for that very reason the newspaper owners he says are an unelected unaccountable undemocratic group of millionaires more powerful than sovereign governments and elected officials they have the power to make or break politicians and to present their own agenda in such a way as to claim that it is public opinion belloc's conclusion that the capitalist press's power would be broken by the free press was overly optimistic in fact the decades following the appearance of this book saw the capitalist press grow ever stronger particularly through its acquisition of the movie and television industry through these media the lies and distortions against which the author warned would be amplified even beyond his imagining it would only be through the emergence of the internet that the free press would eventually be given an equal platform with the capitalist press a development which the author would have no doubt savored

The Free Press 2019-05-30 peter is a fascinating character in all four canonical gospels not only as a literary figure in each of the gospels respectively but also when looked at from an intertextual perspective this book examines how peter is rewritten for each of the gospels positing that the different portrayals of this crucial figure reflect not only the theological priorities of each gospel author but also their attitude towards their predecessors rewriting peter as an intertextual character in the canonical gospels is the first critical study of the canonical gospels which is based on markan priority luke s use of mark and matthew and john s use of all three synoptic gospels through a selection of close readings damgaard both provides a new critical portrait of peter and proposes a new theory of source and redaction in the gospels in the last thirty years there has been an increasing appreciation of the gospels literary design and of the gospel writers as authors and innovators rather than merely compilers and transmitters however literary critics have tended to read each gospel individually as if they were written for isolated communities this book reconsiders the relationship between the gospels arguing that the works were composed for a general audience and that the writers were bold and creative interpreters of the tradition they inherited from earlier gospel sources damgaard s view that the gospel authors were familiar with the work of their predecessors and that the divergences between their narratives were deliberate sheds new light on their intentions and has a tremendous impact on our understanding of the gospels

Information Science as an Interscience 2015-03-17 this book returns to the question at the center of our existence a question that the narcissistic culture in which we are immersed systematically tends to remove why the underlying thesis is that the answer must not be sought in success or social recognition but in a fragment of truth hidden somewhere inside each of us which reveals itself only if we detach ourselves from our ego and its certainties it is not therefore a matter of finding yet another philosophical theory of the meaning of existence but rather of shedding light on the conditions under which such meaning can emerge the author shows us that the ultimate source of our existential orientation lies in the affective sphere and that the current crisis of orientation is derived from the atrophy of the process of affective maturation on a large scale and from a lack of knowledge and experience about which techniques are best to reactivate it we are like glowworms that had once unlearned how to illuminate and have since begun to hover around the magic lantern of the ascetic ideal already criticized by nietzsche and then around neon advertising signs we are glowworms that have forgotten that we have within our own affective structure a precious source of orientation the basic thesis is that this source of orientation can be reactivated through the care of desire and practices of emotional sharing
