this book delves into one of the greatest riddles perplexing modern science why are humans so smart in a format understandable even by the non expert the author investigates the origins of human intelligence starting with classical darwinian concepts thus the strengths and beauty of natural selection are presented with many examples taken from natural history common criticisms of darwin from scientists and non scientists alike are confronted and shown to be either inconclusive or outright false the author then launches into a discussion of human intelligence the most important feature of human evolution and how it cannot be fully explained by mutational selection modern humans are smarter than what is demanded by our evolutionary experience as hunter gatherers the difficulty lies in the inability of natural selection to answer the following question how can a complex set of genes controlling expensive traits with little immediate benefit come into permanent existence within a short time period in every member of a small population which was dispersed and geographically isolated over a huge planet which had a low reproductive output and a low mutation rate the book concludes with a speculative epigenetic theory of intelligence that does not require dna mutations as a source of evolution although the book is comprehensible by anyone with a college education this last section in particular should intrigue both layman and expert alike contents evolution darwin and natural selectiondarwin analyzedlamarckthe thin bone vault definition of intelligencea brief history of the mindpopulationcultureanimal intelligenceevolutionary potential elementary geneticsgene variability examples directed mutationsgenetics and intelligenceevolution of intelligence an epigenetic model epigeneticsthe cranial feedback mechanism readership general public biology and anthropology undergraduates and graduates keywords evolution intelligence anthropology general interest non fictionkey features a particularly lucid description of the strengths and weaknesses of darwinian evolution written in an enjoyable style palatable to anyone interested in biologyample citations of natural phenomena to stimulate general interest in the readera novel discussion of human intelligence that has no counterpart in current booksan epigenetic theory of evolution in the final pages of the book that complements the natural selection concept
