this book presents information on the development of a non equilibrium approach to the study of heat and mass transfer problems using vapor liquid interfaces and demonstrates its application to a broad range of problems in the process the following peculiarities become apparent 1 at vapor condensation on the interface from gas vapor mixture non condensable components can lock up the interface surface and condensation stops completely 2 at the evolution of vapor film on the heater in superfluid helium he ii the boiling mass flux density from the vapor liquid interface is effectively zero at the macroscopic scale 3 in problems concerning the motion of he ii bridges inside capillaries filled by vapor in the presence of axial heat flux the he ii bridge cannot move from the heater as would a traditional liquid but in the opposite direction instead thus the heater attracts the superfluid helium bridge 4 the shape of liquid vapor interface at film boiling on the axis symmetric heaters immersed in liquid greatly depends on heat flux in the interface thus a new type of hydrostatic problems appears when in contrast to traditional statements the shape of the liquid vapor interface has a complex profile with a point of inflection and a smooth exit on a free liquid surface using science to improve the blm wild horse and burro program a way forward reviews the science that underpins the bureau of land management s oversight of free ranging horses and burros on federal public lands in the western united states concluding that constructive changes could be implemented the wild horse and burro program has not used scientifically rigorous methods to estimate the population sizes of horses and burros to model the effects of management actions on the animals or to assess the availability and use of forage on rangelands evidence suggests that horse populations are growing by 15 to 20 percent each year a level that is unsustainable for maintaining healthy horse populations as well as healthy ecosystems promising fertility control methods are available to help limit this population growth however in addition science based methods exist for improving population estimates predicting the effects of management practices in order to maintain genetically diverse healthy populations and estimating the productivity of rangelands greater transparency in how science based methods are used to inform management decisions may help increase public confidence in the wild horse and burro program
