this compact forcefully argued work calls sam harris richard dawkins steven pinker and the rest of the so called new atheists to account for failing to take seriously the historical record to which they so freely appeal when attacking religion the popularity of such books as harris s the end of faith dawkins s the god delusion and christopher hitchens god is not great set off a spate of reviews articles and books for and against yet in all the controversy little attention has focused on the historical evidence and arguments they present to buttress their case this book is the first to challenge in depth the distortions of this new atheist history it presents the evidence that the three authors and their allies ignore it points out the lack of historical credibility in their work when judged by the conventional criteria used by mainstream historians it does not deal with the debate over theism and atheism nor does it aim to defend the historical record of christianity or religion more generally it does aim to defend the integrity of history as a discipline in the face of its distortion by those who violate it

Jesus, Contradicted 2024-05-28

the differences and discrepancies in the gospels constitute the foremost objections to their reliability and the credibility of their message some have tried to resolve gospels contradictions with strained harmonization efforts many others conclude that the gospels are hopelessly contradictory and therefore historically unreliable accounts of jesus in jesus contradicted new testament scholar michael licona shows how the genre of ancient biography to which the gospels belong actually allows biographers to be flexible in how they report events construct a narrative and make an argument licona demonstrates that the intentional changes to the jesus tradition by the evangelists reveal that the differences in how the gospels report events are not grounds for their rejection instead they are a result of the gospel writers employing standard literary conventions common in their time for writing ancient biography licona introduces readers to the genre of ancient biography through plutarch who wrote 48 of the 90 extant biographies written within 150 years of jesus giving numerous examples of compositional devices employed by plutarch and comparing them with instances in the gospels where the evangelists appear to use similar techniques licona also examines theon s progymnasmata a first century textbook that provides six techniques for paraphrasing one s sources when writing a narrative in doing so he helps readers understand why the gospels report many events differently finally licona concludes by addressing the thorny question of whether the editorial moves commonplace in ancient biography are compatible with the doctrines of the divine inspiration and the inerrancy of scripture rather than trying to resolve discrepancies by bending the gospel narrative which risks making them say things they aren t saying jesus contradicted situates the gospels within their proper context and helps readers account for differences in the gospels in a cohesive and historically cogent way the focus of this analysis centers on the work of early christians prominent theologians and church historians who have developed and established orthodoxy in christian theology apologetic approaches are analyzed and problems are shown to emerge when there is a lack of distinction made between historical and theological methods apologists who approach the study of history the same way they approach theology do both disciplines a disservice the second part of the narrative argues that christ is the essence of faith i.e. this entity is a deity that exists only through faith christ's miracles his resurrection and atonement are not consistent with expected realities in history moreover these elements of the deity were never intended to be proofs in a historical sense reason therefore in this context is not humanity's salvation nothing can be learned about christ from history he is a paradox as kierkegaard argued christ cannot be known from a historical perspective spiritual truths however have been developed by theologians and can be learned through the christian faith this book will be especially alluring for those interested in understanding some of the most influential developments of early christianity that morphed into components of the christian doctrine it covers textual analysis of ancient writings historical approaches to studying theology and methods used for historical inquiry emphasis is placed on historical methods and why it's important to distinguish theology from history

perhaps the most important historiographic innovation of the twentieth century was the application of the historical method to wider and more expansive areas of the past where historians once defined the study of history strictly in terms of politics and the actions and decisions of great men historians today are just as likely to inquire into a much wider domain of the past from the lives of families and peasants to more abstract realms such as the history of mentalities and emotions historians have applied their method to a wider variety of subjects regardless of the topic historians ask questions seek evidence draw inferences from that evidence create representations and subject these representations to the scrutiny of other historians this book severs the historical method from the past altogether by applying that method to a domain outside of the past the goal of this book is to apply history as method to the study of the future a subject matter domain that most historians have traditionally and vigorously avoided historians have traditionally rejected the idea that we can use the study of history to think about the future the book reexamines this long held belief and argues that the historical method is an excellent way to think about and represent the future at the same time the book asserts that futurists should not view the future as a scientist might aiming for predictions and certainties but rather should view the future in the same way that an historian views the past
