discreet ideas about methods and practice roles and functions of varying disciplines are reviewed in an effort to discriminate role clarity and provide implications for practice in relation to different models this issue is valuable to the ot who seeks an understanding of the varying viewpoints and current practice in the substance abuse field print coursesmart this collection provides authoritative coverage of neurobiology of addiction models of addiction sociocultural perspectives on drug use family and community factors prevention theories and techniques professional issues the criminal justice system and substance abuse assessment and diagnosis and more executive summary and recommendations the goal of this tip is to recommend guidelines for primary care clinicians to follow in caring for patients with alcohol and other drug use disorders these guidelines were developed by a consensus panel of clinicians researchers and educators who work on the prevention and treatment of substance use disorders protocols are based partly on research evidence partly on panel members clinical experience the algorithm to the left follows a patient with substance use problems who presents in a primary care setting the chart will serve as a guide or road map through screening brief assessment brief intervention assessment referral specialized treatment and followup care as they are detailed in the tip since substance use disorders are often chronic conditions that progress slowly over time primary care clinicians through their regular long term contact with patients are in an ideal position to screen for alcohol and drug problems and monitor each patient's status furthermore studies have found that primary care clinicians can actually help many patients decrease alcohol consumption and its harmful consequences through office based interventions that take only 10 to 15 minutes kahan et al 1995 wallace et al 1988 this potential however is largely untapped saitz and colleagues found that of a sample of patients seeking substance abuse treatment 45 percent reported that their primary care physician was unaware of their substance abuse saitz et al in press yet even though screening and limited treatment of substance use disorders do not require a large time investment the consensus panel that developed this tip recognized that many primary care clinicians are already overwhelmed by the demands imposed by expanded gatekeeper functions the panel realized that a practical approach to addressing patients substance abuse problems was needed one that recognized the time and resource limitations inherent in primary care practice and offered a series of graduated approaches that could be incorporated into a normal clinic or office routine biological medical and genetic factors as well as psychological social familial cultural and other environmental features all bear on substance abuse addressing the condition effectively requires a team effort especially when it has progressed beyond the early stage for this reason in addition to screening and intervention treatment options these guidelines include information about viable referral for assessment and treatment as well as followup readers will notice that the tip contains more information on alcohol use and abuse than on use of illicit drugs this reflects both the scope of the problems and the research literature available about them it is estimated that about 18 million people with alcohol use problems and 5 million users of illicit drugs need treatment although the panel recognizes that tobacco is an addictive substance with a major public health impact it is not included in this tip because the topic falls outside csat's purview readers are referred to smoking cessation a guide for primary care clinicians published by the agency for health care policy and research agency for health care policy and research 1996 the consensus panel's recommendations are based on a combination of clinical experience and research based evidence in the list below the summary guidelines supported by the research literature are followed by 1 clinically based recommendations are marked 2 citations supporting the former are referenced in the body of the document screening and assessment instruments mentioned below are reproduced and discussed in chapters 2 and 4 and appendix c the guidelines are presented in more detail in chapter 6 substance abuse disorders are among the most prevalent psychiatric disorders and are frequently comorbid with other psychiatric and health conditions and accompanied by social problems however they remain under recognized and under treated many physicians and mental health practitioners receive little to no Behavioral Treatment for Substance Abuse in People with Serious and Persistent Mental Illness 2007 executive summary and recommendations the goal of this tip is to recommend guidelines for primary care clinicians to follow in caring for patients with alcohol and other drug use disorders these guidelines were developed by a consensus panel of clinicians researchers and educators who work on the prevention and treatment of substance use disorders protocols are based partly on research evidence partly on panel members clinical experience the algorithm to the left follows a patient with substance use problems who presents in a primary care setting the chart will serve as a guide or road map through screening brief assessment brief intervention assessment referral specialized treatment and followup care as they are detailed in the tip since substance use disorders are often chronic conditions that progress slowly over time primary care clinicians through their regular long term contact with patients are in an ideal position to screen for alcohol and drug problems and monitor each patient's status furthermore studies have found that primary care clinicians can actually help many patients decrease alcohol consumption and its harmful consequences through office based interventions that take only 10 to 15 minutes kahan et al 1995 wallace et al 1988 this potential however is largely untapped saitz and colleagues found that of a sample of patients seeking substance abuse treatment 45 percent reported that their primary care physician was unaware of their substance abuse saitz et al in press yet even though screening and limited treatment of substance use disorders do not require a large time investment the consensus panel that developed this tip recognized that many primary care clinicians are already overwhelmed by the demands imposed by expanded gatekeeper functions the panel realized that a practical approach to addressing patients substance abuse problems was needed one that recognized the time and resource limitations inherent in primary care practice and offered a series of graduated approaches that could be incorporated into a normal clinic or office routine biological medical and genetic factors as well as psychological social familial cultural and other environmental features all bear on substance abuse addressing the condition effectively requires a team effort especially when it has progressed beyond the early stage for this reason in addition to screening and intervention treatment options these guidelines include information about viable referral for assessment and treatment as well as followup readers will notice that the tip contains more information on alcohol use and abuse than on use of illicit drugs this reflects both the scope of the problems and the research literature available about them it is estimated that about 18 million people with alcohol use problems and 5 million users of illicit drugs need treatment although the panel recognizes that tobacco is an addictive substance with a major public health impact it is not included in this tip because the topic falls outside the purview readers are referred to smoking cessation a guide for primary care clinicians published by the agency for health care policy and research 1996 the consensus panel's recommendations are based on a combination of clinical experience and research based evidence in the list below the summary guidelines supported by the research literature are followed by 1 clinically based recommendations are marked 2 citations supporting the former are referenced in the body of the document screening and assessment instruments mentioned below are reproduced and discussed in chapters 2 and 4 and appendix c the guidelines are presented in more detail in chapter 6
