A World Safe for Commerce 2024-02-06 how commerce determines whether america preserves the peace or goes to war when the cold war ended many believed that expanding trade would usher in an era of peace yet today the united states finds itself confronting not just russia in europe but china in the indo pacific africa and latin america shedding new light on how trade both reduces and increases the risks of international crisis a world safe for commerce traces how since the nation s founding the united states has consistently moved from peace to conflict when the commerce needed for national security is under threat dale copeland shows how commerce pushes the united states and its rivals to expand their spheres of influence for access to goods even as they worry about provoking a breakdown in trade relations that could spiral into military conflict taking readers from the wars with britain in 1776 and 1812 to world war ii and the cold war he describes how america s leaders have grappled with this inherent tension and why they have shifted sometimes dramatically from peaceful mutually beneficial policies to coercion and force in order to increase control over vital trade and prevent economic decline a world safe for commerce reveals how trade competition could lead the united states and china into full scale confrontation but it also offers hope that both sides can work to improve their overall trade expectations and foster the confidence needed for long term peace and stability

~~focuses on botswana's medium term expenditure framework mtef~~ the government of botswana has committed to introduce the mtef by 2016 the mtef will provide a more explicit linkage between national development plan priorities and budget allocations by adopting a medium term budgeting horizon an mtef model based on a binding nominal expenditure ceiling covering 100 percent of government expenditure is appropriate to support the commitment to the resource allocations approved under the mtef a number of prioritization control and accountability arrangements need to be put in place

Policy Paper 2000 in spite of the increasing attention attributed to the rise in prominence of the brics brazil russia india china and south africa countries few studies have looked at the ways in which broader social expectations with respect to the role of higher education across the brics have changed or not in recent years our point of departure is that contrary to the conventional wisdom focusing on functionalistic perspectives higher education systems are not just designed by governments to fulfill certain functions but have a tendency for evolving in a rather unpredictable fashion as a result of the complex interplay between a number of internal and external factors in reality national higher education systems develop and change according to a complex process that encompasses the expectations of governmental agencies markets the aspirations of the population for the benefits of education the specific institutional traditions and cultures of higher education examine the factors that led germany to refrain from participating in the nato mission in libya and to abstain on resolution 1973 the paper will also analyze the reactions in the german political arena and the press to the decision it will be argued that the german policy towards the libya intervention was not a strategic repositioning of german foreign policy the abstention was a result of the very specific circumstances around the libya intervention and was influenced by various factors including uncertainty over the military risks involved the speed in which the resolution was put forward in new york the late switch in positions of the united states and the personal convictions of the foreign minister while the abstention itself represents a break with german foreign policy traditions the reluctance to participate in the military intervention itself is in line with these traditions
