let us c has been part of learning and teaching material in most engineering and science institutes round the country for years now from last year or so i received several suggestions that its size be pruned a bit as many learners who

learn c language in their engineering or science curriculum have some familiarity with it i am happy to fulfill this request i hope the readers would appreciate the lean look of the current edition in one of the previous edition i had realigned the chapters in such a manner that if a c programming course is taught using let us c it can be finished in 22 lectures of one hour each with one chapter's contents devoted to one lecture i am happy that many readers liked this idea and reported that this has made their learning path trouble free a more rational reorganization of end of chapter exercises in the book has also been well received riding on that feedback i had introduced one more feature in the fifteenth edition namely these are hand crafted notes on c programming from the reader's emails i gather that they have turned out to be very useful to help revise their concepts on the day before the examination viva voce or interview many readers also told me that they have immensely benefitted from the inclusion of the chapter on interview FAQs i have improved this chapter further the rationale behind this chapter is simple ultimately all the readers of let us c sooner or later end up in an interview room where they are required to take questions on c programming i now have a proof that this chapter has helped to make that journey smooth and fruitful all the programs present in the book and some more are available in source code form at kicit.com/books/letusc/sourcecode you are free to download them improve them change them do whatever with them if you wish to get solutions for the exercises in the book they are available in another book titled let us c solutions if you want some more problems for practice they are available in the book titled let us c workbook as usual new editions of these t

Febvre asked this core question in the problem of unbelief could sixteenth century people hold religious views that were not those of official church sanctioned christianity or could they simply not believe at all the answer informed a wider debate on modern history particularly modern french history did the religious attitudes of the enlightenment and the twentieth century notably secularism and atheism first take root in the sixteenth century could the spirit of scientific and rational inquiry of the twentieth century have begun with the rejection of god and christianity by men such as Rabelais writing in his allegorical novel Gargantua and Pantagruel the work most often cited as a proto atheist text prior to Febvre's study the debate hinged on some key differences of interpretation was Rabelais mocking the structures of the christian church in which case he might be anticlerical was he mocking the bible scriptures or church doctrines in which case he might be anti christian or was he mocking the very idea of god's existence in which case he might be an atheist the other great contribution that Febvre made to the study of history can be found not so much in the fine detail of this work as in the additions that he made to the historian's toolkit in this sense Febvre was highly creative indeed it can be argued that he ranks among the most creative of all historians he sought to move the study of history itself beyond its traditional focus on documentary records arguing instead that close analysis of language could open up a gateway into the ways in which people actually thought and to their subconscious minds this concept the focus on mentalities is core to the hugely influential approach of the Annales group of historians and it enabled a switch in the focus of much historical inquiry away from the study of elites and their deeds and towards new forms of broader social history Febvre also used techniques and models drawn from anthropology and sociology to create new ways of framing and answering questions further extending the range of problems that could be addressed by historians working together with colleagues such as Marc Bloch his understanding of what constituted evidence and of the meanings that could be attributed to it radically redefined what history is and what it should aspire to be the 6th volume of advances in forensic haemogenetics comprises the scientific contributions to the 16th congress of the international society for forensic haemogenetics isfh held on sept 12 16 1995 at santiago de compostela spain the numerous papers mainly deal with the applicability of dna technology to forensic questions the invited speakers approached important topics such as variation of mitochondrial dna in ancient and modern humans the str approach to solve forensic questions the statistical analysis of str data automation of dna analysis long pcr and its applications national dna databases and ethical and legal aspects of dna analysis it has become obvious that pcr based polymorphic systems clearly dominate the scene of forensic dna analysis worldwide it will however be necessary to make efforts to standardize the still increasing number of systems with regard to nomenclature to achieve a universal comparability of results legal systems differ from country to country which has to be taken into account when reporting dna results there is still controversy about the way dna results are to be presented in court rooms we should make efforts to assess the value of dna evidence by a common scientific statistical approach that is comprehensive enough to treat all possible hypotheses such as involved relatives different ethnics and or the not so rare situations with mixed stains
