The Lost Art of Feeding Kids

2015-05-05

a lively story of raising a child to enjoy real food in a processed world and the importance of maintaining healthy food cultures why is it so easy to find sugary cereals and dinosaur shaped chicken nuggets in a grocery store but so hard to shop for nutritious simple food for our children if you've ever wondered this you're not alone but it might surprise you to learn that this isn't just an american problem packaged snacks and junk foods are displacing natural home cooked meals throughout the world even in italy a place we tend to associate with a healthy mediterranean diet italian children traditionally sat at the table with the adults and ate everything from anchovies to artichokes parents passed a love of seasonal regional foods down to their children and this generational appreciation of good food turned italy into the world culinary capital we've come to know today when jeannie marshall moved from canada to rome she found the healthy food culture she expected however she was also amazed to find processed foods aggressively advertised and junk food on every corner while determined to raise her son on a traditional italian diet marshall sets out to discover how even a food tradition as entrenched as italy's can be greatly eroded or even lost in a single generation she takes readers on a journey through the processed food and marketing industries that are re-manufacturing our children's diets while also celebrating the pleasures of real food as she walks us through roman street markets gathering local ingredients from farmers and butchers at once an exploration of the us food industry's global reach and a story of finding the best way to feed her child the lost art of feeding kids examines not only the role that big food companies play in forming children's tastes and the impact that has on their health but also how parents and communities can push back to create a culture that puts our kids health and happiness ahead of the interests of the food industry what does the concept of the best interests of the child mean in practice how should it be interpreted and applied this publication sheds lights on different aspects of this concept the concept of the best interests of child as stated in article 3 1 of the united nations convention on the rights of the child has caused many controversies and debates amongst policy makers experts and practitioners although central to a child s full enjoyment of his or her rights the meaning of the concept in practice and how it should be interpreted and applied is still part of today s debate the belgian authorities and the council of europe organised on 9 and 10 december 2014 a conference on the best interests of the child a dialogue between theory and practice to provide an opportunity for actors involved in decisions that have an impact on children s lives to share knowledge and enhance the understanding of the concept of the child s best interest featuring in this publication are the 21 different viewpoints presented during the conference on the concept of the best interests of the child they are divided into four chapters namely those presenting general reflections of the concept assessing determining and monitoring best interests using the concept in different environments and understanding the concept in family affairs all viewpoints agree on the fact that there is no comprehensive definition of the concept and that its vagueness has resulted in practical difficulties for those trying to apply it some suggest that the best interest should therefore only be used when necessary appropriate and feasible for advancing children s rights whereas others see the flexibility of the concept as its strong point through their different interpretations and analysis this publication offers a solid contribution to the overall understanding of the concept of the best interests of child necessary to improving and safeguarding children s rights overall
