environmental harms exert a significant toll and pose substantial economic costs on societies around the world although such harms have been studied from both legal and social science perspectives these disciplinary specific approaches are not on their own fully able to address the complexity of these environmental challenges many legal approaches for example are limited by their inattention to the motivations behind environmental offences whereas many social science approaches are hindered by an insufficient grounding in current legislative frameworks this edited collection constitutes a pioneering attempt to overcome these limitations by uniting legal and social science perspectives together the book s contributors forge an innovative socio legal approach to more effectively respond to and to prevent environmental harms around the world integrating theoretical and empirical work the book presents carefully selected illustrations of how legal and social science scholarship can be brought together to improve policies the various chapters examine how a socio legal approach can ultimately lead to a more comprehensive understanding of environmental harms as well as to innovative and effective responses to such environmental offences non instrumentalist private law theory has been dominated by an interpretivist methodology that seeks to understand the concepts doctrines and structures of the law in principled terms this has resulted in the neglect of purely normative analysis and a failure to engage systematically with the methodologies of moral and political philosophy wrongs harms and compensation paying for our mistakes departs from this approach arguing instead that the justification of tort law is dependent on our underlying moral corrective duties in this book adam slavny develops a pluralistic account of these duties which encompasses both wrongful and non wrongful conduct complicating the view that torts should be regarded as a coherent set of wrongs he also places the practice of enforcing corrective duties in a broader context arguing that it should not be isolated or immune to critiques based on distributive justice and that our duties are in fact consistent with institutional arrangements other than tort law including various types of compensation schemes what emerges is neither a wholesale defence of or attack on tort law but an insistence that its normative foundations are much more complex diverse and malleable than a focus on current legal practices would suggest a field defining study of the novel as a tragic form sandra macpherson s groundbreaking study of the rise of the novel connects its form to developments in liability law across the seventeenth to nineteenth centuries in particular macpherson argues for a connection to legal principles of strict liability that hold persons accountable for harms inflicted upon others in the absence of intention consent direct action or foreknowledge in convincing polemical readings of defoe richardson and fielding she shows that these laws share with the novel the view that the state of a person s mind is irrelevant to the question of her responsibility for her actions macpherson urges readers to rethink the ancient consensus that the novel differs from tragedy in its elevation of character over plot she concludes that the realist novel is ultimately a tragic form committed to holding persons accountable for accidents of fate macpherson s original insights continue to have a broad and lasting impact on the study of the novel kent greenawalt's From the Bottom Up constitutes a collection of articles and essays written over the last five decades of his career they cover a wide range of topics many of which address ties between political and moral philosophy and what the law does and should provide a broad general theme is that in all these domains what really is the wisest approach to difficult circumstances often depends on the particular issues involved and their context both judges and scholars too often rely on abstract general formulations to provide answers a notable example in political philosophy was the suggestion of the great and careful scholar john rawls that laws should be based exclusively on public reason the essays explain that given uncertainty of what people perceive as the line between public reason and their religious convictions the inability of public reason to resolve some difficult questions such as what we owe to higher animals and the feeling of many that their religious understanding should count urging exclusive reliance on public reason is not a viable approach other essays show similar problems with asserted bases for legal interpretations and the content of provisions such as the first amendment the issues explored in this book have unfortunately come to be known as maternal fetal conflicts the phrase is unsatisfactory because it is misleading it places the emphasis on the well being of the fetus instead of on the born child who will bear the burden of any harm done prenatally it assumes a conflict between a pregnant women and her offspring while the issue is usually more complex and more broadly based and it incorrectly implies that all pregnant women are appropriately regarded as mothers for these reasons i have chosen to avoid the phrase maternal fetal conflict altogether and will instead speak in terms of preventable prenatal harm i mention this at the outset for those of you familiar with maternal fetal conflicts who might be wondering if i am addressing the same issues yes but i am trying to look at them in a new and i hope more fruitful way i would like to thank the other participants in the hastings center s maternal fetal project especially those who disageed with me for being so thought provoking and i owe a lasting debt of gratitude to henry ruth and allen buchanan for their invaluable counsel this book of eleven chapters and an introduction is by and about women the harms and crimes to which they are subjected as a result of global social processes and their efforts to take control of their own futures the chapters explore the criminogenic and damaging consequences of the policies of the global financial institutions as well as the effects of growing economic polarisation both in pockets of the developed world and most markedly in the global south reflecting on this evidence in the introduction the editors necessarily challenge existing criminological theory by expanding and elaborating a conception of social harm that encompasses this range of problems and exposes where new solutions derived from criminological theory are necessary a second theme addresses human rights from the standpoint of indigenous women minority women and those seeking refuge inadequate and individualised as the human rights instruments presently are for most of these women a politics of human rights emerges as central to the achieving of legal and political equality and protection from individual violence women in the poorest countries however are sceptical as to the efficacy of rights claims in the face of the depredations of international and global capital and the social dislocation produced thereby nonetheless this is a hopeful book emphasising the contribution which academic work can make provided the methodology is appropriately gendered and sufficiently sensitive in its guiding ideology and techniques to hear and learn from the all too often globalised other but in the end there is no solution without politics and in both the opening and the closing sections of this book there are chapters which address this what continues to be special about women's political practice is the connection between the groundedness of small groups and the fluidity and flexibility of regional and international networks the effective politics of the global age this book then is a new criminology for and by women a book which opens up a new criminological terrain for both women and men and a book which cannot easily be read without an emotional response
