improved technologies are increasingly promoted to farmers in sub saharan african countries to address low agricultural productivity in their staple crops there is however a lack of evidence on how adoption affects farmers labor use and profitability at the farm level as well as the importance gender roles play all essential drivers for the successful up scaling of the use of the improved technologies this paper analyses the labor and profitability impact of the recently introduced row planting technology in teff production in ethiopia based on agronomic evidence in experimental settings the government of ethiopia has focused extension efforts on promoting the widespread uptake of row planting to address low teff yields replacing the traditional broadcasting method of plant teff using an innovative randomized controlled trial set up we show that the implementation of row planting at the farm level significantly increases total labor use but not teff yields relative to broadcast planting resulting in a substantial drop in labor productivity when adopting row planting moreover the implementation of row planting has important consequences for inter and intra household labor allocation with relatively more use of non family labor the adoption of row planting was further found not to be profitable for farmers in the first year of the promotion campaign seemingly explaining the limited success in up scaling the adoption of the technology by farmers in the second year of the program

what people are saying about this book a marvelous recounting of ethiopian and world history during those years mandatory reading for anyone interested in third world relations and certainly for anyone who seeks to understand contemporary ethiopian or horn of africa affairs foreign service journal a significant primary source in its first hand account by a meticulously observant insider foreign affairs commands attention and respect john spencer s personal candid and basically reliable record will have an honored place in the contemporary annals of that tortured country times literary supplement spencer is one of the very few living people in a position to describe ethiopia s efforts to survive during those years library journal spencer was privy to many important decisions of particular interest is his account of haile sellassie s disenchantment with the u s publisher s weekly after the hard fate which befell the emperor and his notables spencer is maybe the only one of the old regime s key persons still alive there is hardly a single page one would want to miss sture linner in svenska dagbladet i found ethiopia at bay intensely interesting sad and even tragic in the greek mode what a series of missed opportunities anachronistic colonial arrogances and western shortsightedness the book would be enormously instructive to students of international relations generally lincoln gordon former president johns hopkins university valuable indeed especially significant is spencer s cogent analysis of the emperor himself recommended for college university and larger public libraries choice

The Hamar of Southern Ethiopia

africa has experienced a number of territorial disputes over land and maritime boundaries due in part to its colonial and post colonial history this book explores the legal political and historical nature of disputes over territory in the african continent and critiques the content and application of contemporary international law to the resolution of african territorial and border disputes drawing on central concepts of public international law such as sovereignty and jurisdiction and socio political concepts such as colonialism ethnicity nationality and self determination this book interrogates the intimate connection that peoples and nations have to territory and the severe disputes these may lead to gbenga oduntan identifies the major principles of law at play in relation to territorial and boundary disputes and argues that the predominant use of foreign based adjudicatory mechanisms in attempting to deal with african boundary disputes alienates those institutions and mechanisms from african people and can contribute to the recurrence of conflicts and disputes in and among african territories he suggests that the understanding and application of multidisciplinary dispute resolution mechanisms and strategies can allow for a more holistic and effective treatment of boundary disputes as an in depth study into the legal socio political and anthropological mechanisms involved in the understanding of territorial boundaries and a unique synthesis of an african jurisprudence of international boundaries law this book will be of great use and interest to students researchers and practitioners in african and public international law international relations and decision makers in need of better understanding the settlement of disputes over territorial boundaries in both africa and the wider world
