this volume of astrophysical data deals with planets and stars a second volume part ii will give data for galaxies and the universe they both provide basic data for use by all scientists from the amateur astronomer to the professional astrophysicist in this first volume we not only provide physical parameters of planets stars and their environment but we also provide the celestial coordinates required to observe them here we use c g s units for they are the most commonly used in astronomy and astrophysics but our volume begins with astronomical and physical constants and the conversion factors needed for other units the next section concerns the planets and their satellites it singles out the earth and moon for special treatment spacecraft rendezvous with the planets and satellites have led to improved values for their atmospheric compositions orbital parameters magnetic fields masses radii rotation periods and surface pressures and temperatures this section also contains data for the asteroids comets and their debris we then discuss everyday stars beginning with the sun and continuing with basic stellar data the brightest stars and nearby stars special categories of stars such as the wolf rayet stars magnetic stars flare stars and rs cvn binary stars are included emartin acute pain services are now established worldwide and guidelines have been drawn for the management of acute pain resulting from surgical or medical procedures and trauma however the treatment of pain after surgery is still inadequate and no progress has been made in recent years in several countries including germany there are still innumerable patients who find the is also no early postoperative period to be an unpleasant experience there doubt that pain plays a role in the pathogenesis of postoperative complications that could be avoided with effective pain management however concern about side effects and inadequate knowledge of the pharmacokinetics and dynamics of drugs is still putting constraints on treatment an acute pain service should be responsible for adequately treating pain training medical and nursing staff and evaluating new and existing methods of treatment as anesthesiologists deal with pain in the operating theater it is not surprising that they claim a leading role for themselves in acute pain services choosing from the various postoperative pain treatment options
