Technical Manual 1943 solitary persons describes the autism theories of george frankl 1897 1975 hans asperger 1906 1980 and leo kanner 1894 1981 these medical doctors were among the first to work with autistic children frankl s role in the history of autism was discovered in 2015 and is clarified here asperger and kanner are well known founders of autism research but this dissertation presents new discoveries about their work and a new interpretation of their work as a whole frankl asperger and kanner each had a metaphor for autistic children frankl used a prisoners metaphor he believed that autistic children even when they are with other people are stuck in a solitary state they do not express how they feel or notice such expressions in others asperger s metaphor for autistic children was that they are machines he believed that autism involves an overdevelopment of intellect and of independence from the environment kanner wrote that autistic children are barometers sensitive to the emotional climate in their home he believed that autism is an emotional disorder that affects and is affected by the whole personality contemporary theories of autism usually explain only some of its symptoms this conceptual historical study is a search for older theories of autism that conceptualise its entire symptomology
