The Delusion of Knowledge Transfer 2016-12-13

with the rise of the knowledge for development paradigm expert advice has become a prime instrument of foreign aid at the same time it has been object of repeated criticism the chronic failure of technical assistance a notion under which advice is commonly subsumed has been documented in a host of studies nonetheless international organisations continue to send advisors promising to increase the effectiveness of expert support if their technocratic recommendations are taken up this book reveals fundamental problems of expert advice in the context of aid that concern issues of power and legitimacy rather than merely flaws of implementation based on empirical evidence from south africa and tanzania the authors show that aid related advisory processes are inevitably obstructed by colliding interests political pressures and hierarchical relations that impede knowledge transfer and mutual learning as a result recipient governments find themselves caught in a perpetual cycle of dependency continuously advised by experts who convey the shifting paradigms and agendas of their respective donor governments for young democracies the persistent presence of external actors is hazardous ultimately it poses a threat to the legitimacy of their governments if their policy making becomes more responsive to foreign demands than to the preferences and needs of their citizens market liquidity is an essential feature of the stock market so investors and corporates can transact as and when it suits them a key priority for stock market operators is to ensure there are market participants with a wide range of different perspectives which offer plentiful trading volumes stock exchanges need to encourage investors with shorter term horizons to lubricate the transaction process the vitality of shorter term operators is a key part of the success of the whole however in recent times the proliferation of credit has favoured speculative strategies and along with new technologies trading volumes have been driven up by the speed at which data is accessed and put to use consequently market participants optimise their strategies for quick returns and become largely disconnected from or potentially in conflict with the wider interests of longer term investors this is the fast finance problem in this new chapter of slow finance gervais williams builds on his previous work to further consider the problems and solutions for today's financial markets he suggests that the debate which has focused on the computerised algorithms that instigate rapid automated buy or sell orders at remote exchanges needs to be extended further and a more forward looking policy that brings the parallel markets together into one physical location to concentrate market volumes be implemented based on his extensive industry experience gervais williams outlines market liquidity stock markets liquidity changes over recent decades and the scope to game the system addressing the problems of high frequency traders the overlooked problem how markets fragmented geographically during the boom fostering true market liquidity beyond the credit boom to aid productivity growth should the european neighbourhood policy stop at the borders of the european union s immediate neighbouring countries this book is the first full length study of the neighbours of the eu s neighbours a concept originally introduced by the european commission with reference to saharan africa the middle east and central asia these regions in the eu s broader neighbourhood are often perceived as an arc of crisis from which manifold challenges emanate for europe this timely book takes stock of the state of the eu s cooperation with the neighbours of its neighbours and explores how the concept might help promote security stability and prosperity beyond the countries which are formally part of the european neighbourhood policy how can the eu create bridges between these regions what instruments does the eu have at its disposal and how can it link them in order to respond to the challenges and overcome the current fragmentation one of the conclusions is the suggestion to consider a pragmatic eu strategy for the neighbours of its neighbours which addresses the needs of the broader eu neighbourhood in a more systematic and consistent manner and helps transform in the long run the arc of crisis into another ring of friends
