this book brings together research and professional knowledge to enhance the teaching of lower attaining students in secondary mathematics attainment in mathematics is an important social issue since underachievement can make a difference to future life choices particularly amongst certain groups of students raising achievement in secondary mathematics shows how well meant teaching strategies and approaches can in practice exacerbate underachievement in maths by making inappropriate demands on learners as well as criticizing some of the teaching and grouping practices that are considered normal in many schools the book also offers an alternative view of attainment and capability based on real classroom incidents in which low attaining students show themselves to be able to think about mathematics in quite sophisticated ways the author argues that teaching could be based on learners proficiency rather than on correcting deficits in knowledge and behaviour she describes how a group of teachers who believed that their students could do better with higher expectations developed a range of principles and strategies to support their work the students showed significant progress and the teachers felt they were doing a better job with numerous case studies ideas and teaching strategies this book is for anyone who is teaching or learning to teach mathematics this work is highly relevant to the proliferation of accountability measures worldwide james scheurich and douglas foley in many countries the lives of teachers and children are increasingly dominated by programmes of national testing of mathematics and other subjects in england the majority of the items in such tests have set mathematical tasks in every day situations such as shopping this requires children to make decisions about whether to use or not their own every day knowledge and experience in their problem solving some children are likely to have a better feel for this game than others assessing children s mathematical knowledge draws on the analysis of national curriculum test data from more than 600 children of 10 11 and 13 14 years of age as well as in depth interviews with 250 of these as they attempt to solve test problems in order to explore the nature of the difficulties children experience with realistic items the book shows by comparing test and interview data that many children as a consequence of their confusion over the requirements of realistic test items fail in tests to demonstrate mathematical knowledge and understanding that they actually possess the book also explores whether this problem of invalid measurement is equally spread across children from different social backgrounds and across the sexes the book will be of interest to academics and teachers studying for advanced degrees in mathematics education sociology of education and educational assessment
