steadily increasing life expectancy is one of the great achievements of industrialised societies over the last century life expectancy has not only been growing among the young and those reaching retirement age but also especially in recent decades among people ages 80 and above these improvements in life expectancy have led to the emergence of the so called third age when people retire but are still you ful healthy and able to participate in society nevertheless closer to the end of life a fourth age of decrepitude and dependence on others has to be anticipated spite the postponement of functional limitations and severe disabilities into higher ages the debate continues over whether the additional years gained are healthy years or years with severe care need particularly among the oldest old the fastest growing segment of the population future improvements in life expectancy and the health status of the elderly will determine the need for care in the future while different assumptions about these trends based on expert opinion or the extrapolation of past experiences can be made there will always be a degree of uncertainty about future trends a third portant factor driving the extent of future care need is however already determined by the history of the past century and is embedded in the age structures of our populations the past fifteen years has witnessed an explosive growth in the fundamental research and applications of artificial neural networks anns and fuzzy logic fl the main impetus behind this growth has been the ability of such methods to offer solutions not amenable to conventional techniques particularly in application domains involving pattern recognition prediction and control although the origins of anns and fl may be traced back to the 1940s and 1960s respectively the most rapid progress has only been achieved in the last fifteen years this has been due to significant theoretical advances in our understanding of anns and fl complemented by major technological developments in high speed computing in geophysics anns and fl have enjoyed significant success and are now employed routinely in the following areas amongst others 1 exploration seismology a seismic data processing trace editing first break picking deconvolution and multiple suppression wavelet estimation velocity analysis noise identification reduction statics analysis dataset matching prediction attenuation b avo analysis c chimneys d compression i dimensionality reduction e shear wave analysis f interpretation event tracking lithology prediction and well log analysis prospect appraisal hydrocarbon prediction inversion reservoir characterisation quality assessment tomography 2 earthquake seismology and subterranean nuclear explosions 3 mineral exploration 4 electromagnetic i potential field exploration a electromagnetic methods b potential field methods c ground penetrating radar d remote sensing e inversion
