An absolute must-have parenting guide to raising girls in the 21st century, there can be no keener revelation of a country's soul than the way it treats its children. Nelson Mandela's childhood as a stage in human development has been steadily eroded. Children today are introduced to 21st-century adult values and behaviour at an increasingly early age, long before they are developmentally ready to cope with them. We expend immense time and effort attending to their material needs while simultaneously neglecting their developmental needs. In this important polemic, Sue Palmer believes that if we do not get a grip on this problem soon, the increase in developmental disorders, behavioural difficulties, and mental health problems recorded by experts over recent decades will soon spiral out of control. Sue discusses challenges faced in the 21st century, including the problems facing parents in an age of materialism, the way gender wars have intensified those problems, the debate about the female brain, the reasons why contemporary culture can be so damaging for children, especially girls, the challenges involved in detoxifying family life. Every parent, grandparent, teacher, and carer of girls needs to read this book.

why do we steal this question has confounded everyone from parents to judges teachers to psychologists economists to more than a few moral thinkers stealing can be a result of deprivation of envy or of a desire for power and influence an act of theft can also bring forth someone's hidden traits paradoxically proving beneficial to their personal development robert tyminski explores the many dimensions of stealing and in particular how they relate to a subtle balance of loss versus gain that operates in all of us our natural aversion to loss can lead to extreme actions as a means to acquire what we may not be able to obtain through time work or money tyminski uses the myth of jason medea and the golden fleece to explore the dilemmas involved in such situations and demonstrate the timelessness of theft as fundamentally human the psychology of theft and loss incorporates jungian and psychoanalytic theories as well as more recent cognitive research findings to deepen our appreciation for the complexity of human motivations when it comes to stealing culminating in consideration of the idea of a perpetually present inner thief combining case studies jungian theory and analysis of many different types of stealing including robbery kidnapping plagiarism and technotheft the psychology of theft and loss is a fascinating study which will appeal to psychoanalysts psychologists psychiatrists social workers family therapists and students
