researchers and students in developmental psychology have pointed out that the numerous findings from research about human development seem disconnected and that it is difficult to fit fragmented bits of information together studies of separate domains of functioning e g cognition emotion language social relationships identity divide the field and there are increasing calls for integrative conceptions of human development in exploring the dynamics of human development dr catherine raef constructs a theoretical framework that enables readers to reconcile seemingly disparate information by thinking systematically about dynamic developmental processes this approach integrates systems theory organismic developmental theory and sociocultural theory as well as research across cultures and the life span raef brings developmental processes into coherence by building a unified theoretical framework that is organized around the following questions what develops during development what happens during development and how does development happen using a wide range of illustrative empirical examples raef conceptualizes what happens during development in terms of differentiation and integration and explains how development happens through individual social and cultural processes the framework helps to overcome confusion in the field and explore issues such as individual and cultural variability looking beyond age based changed to understand development and resolving fragmentation by starting with whole person functioning the framework also opens up new directions for research this book will be useful to developmentalists graduate students upper level undergraduates and others who seek an integrative understanding of the field as a whole and a systematic way of thinking about and investigating human action and development the diversity of animal signals has been widely documented and the generality of animal signals also tantalizingly suggests that there are common mechanisms that have selected for their origin however while much progress has been made on some fronts we still lack a general theory about why the diversity of signaling structures exist our compilation will directly address this gap by focusing on an exciting new arena of sexual selection namely using functional approaches to understand signaling this approach is rooted in the idea that many signals are designed to transmit important functional information that is both important for issues of male quality and hence male competition and female choice the increasing use of technology in sexual selection studies has enabled researchers to test whether signaling is either constrained by or accurately transmits information about functional capacities further in animals that fight vigorously functional capacities such as endurance or strength may make the difference between winning and losing this volume brings together a diverse collection of researchers who are actively investigating how function and signaling are related these researchers use both a variety of methods and taxa to study animal signaling and we believe that this integrative view is important to open up fresh vistas for why animal signals have evolved
