while the rate of urbanisation in the developing world has increased dramatically over the past 20 years governments capacity to support urban growth has in many cases failed to keep up with this trend non governmental organisations working in the field have long advocated community management of the urban environment as the best solution to this problem and there is now a growing consensus that the answer does indeed lie with local communities yet there is still little understanding of what constitutes meaningful and effective community participation or how it may be achieved in such a complex operating environment sharing the city gives a comprehensive account of urban community participation both in theory and practice it first presents a wide ranging analysis of the issues and develops a participatory framework for urban management using case studies and existing examples from around the world and drawing on lessons learned from previous experience it then develops the theory into a practical working model effective participatory urban management calls for a fundamental rethink on the part of all the actors involved from local authorities and development agencies through local and international ngos to the community based organisations and the communities themselves in redefining their roles and relationships sharing the city presents a new and radically different yet viable and effective approach to the concept of urban management community gardening is as much about community as it is gardening and compared to growing plants cultivating community is far more difficult in community gardening in an unlikely city the struggle to grow together in las vegas schafer documents his time as a member of a fledgling las vegas community garden and the process through which a rotating group of gardeners try to forge community he demonstrates the ways in which choices gardeners make about what goals to pursue or who belongs or what story to tell about their collective efforts influence how they and others experience and interpret the garden the garden culture that emerges over time shapes how or whether community is practiced at the garden and has important consequences for the gardeners abilities to connect with the low income black and latinx community in which it is located schafers analysis provides important insights about urban culture the environment and food justice in the american southwest and a sober look into the often messy process and practice of community for more than one hundred years governments have grappled with the complex problem of how to revitalize distressed urban areas in 1995 the original urban empowerment zones atlanta baltimore chicago detroit new york and philadelphia each received a 100 million federal block grant and access to a variety of market oriented policy tools to support the implementation of a ten year strategic plan to increase economic opportunities and promote sustainable community development in high poverty neighborhoods in collaborative governance for urban revitalization michael j rich and robert p stoker confront the puzzle of why the outcomes achieved by the original empowerment zones varied so widely given that each city had the same set of federal policy tools and resources and comparable neighborhood characteristics the authors analysis based on more than ten years of field research in atlanta and baltimore and extensive empirical analysis of ez processes and outcomes in all six cities shows that revitalization outcomes are best explained by the quality of local governance good local governance makes positive contributions to revitalization efforts while poor local governance retards progress while policy design and contextual factors are important how cities craft and carry out their strategies are critical determinants of successful revitalization rich and stoker find that good governance is often founded on public private cooperation a stance that argues against both the strongest critics of neoliberalism who see private enterprise as dangerous in principle and the strongest opponents of liberalism who would like to reduce the role of government today s local governments are under great pressure to provide services faster cheaper and in more customized ways while meeting stringent standards for financial and performance accountability these trends coupled with a growing distrust of public institutions suggest that local governments have much to gain from effective communication with citizens about service delivery costs processes and priorities because resource allocation issues are very important to citizens the budget document is an ideal platform for presenting that information the budget as a communication tool discusses some of the challenges and drawbacks that often accompany attempts to usefully engage citizens in the budget process and it provides several examples of simple but effective presentations of the information necessary to promote effective citizen understanding of and participation in the budget process
