this book shows how railway technology travel and infrastructure became increasingly and inextricably woven into everyday life in colonial south asia this fascinating urban anthropological analysis of sarajevo and its cultural complexities examines contemporary issues of social divisiveness pluralism and intergroup dynamics in the context of national identity and state formation rather than seeing bosnia herzegovina as a volatile postsocialist society the book presents its capital city as a vibrant yet wounded center of multicultural diversity where citizens live in mutual recognition of difference while asserting a lifestyle that transcends boundaries of ethnicity and religion it further illuminates how sarajevans negotiate group identity in the tumultuous context of history authoritarian rule and interactions with the built environment and one another as she navigates the city fran markowitz shares narratives of local citizenry played out against the larger dramas of nation and state building she shows how sarajevans national identities have been forged in the crucible of power culture language and politics sarajevo a bosnian kaleidoscope acknowledges this central european city s dramatic survival from the ravages of civil war as it advances into the present day global arena diversity in the workplace looks at the concept of diversity in different social and legal contexts and from perspectives such as sociology anthropology psychology philosophy and organizational theory the contributors add a european view to the existing mainly us oriented literature examining how the modern organization promotes and manages diversity accommodating and integrating different value and belief systems and anti discrimination laws throughout history many christians have existed on the margins of society deviants and strangers in lands they call home to survive they have had to construct alternate identities that not only make sense of their religious experiences and beliefs but also equip them to successfully negotiate their social worlds in thailand a nation where social identities are thoroughly intertwined with buddhist religious adherence christians must come to terms with such a marginalized existence by leaving buddhism and adopting what is considered a foreign faith christian converts become deviants to normal thai identity and belonging in response they have discovered creative solutions for traversing this complex terrain of marginalization this book presents a deep exploration of the phenomenon of marginalization as experienced by thai christian converts in it readers will follow participants through the heights of transformative religious experience the lows of severe social displacement the tensions of managing two disparate lifeworlds and two conflicting selves and the comfort and joy of finding a new place to call home in the end the reader will gain deep insight into what it is like to successfully navigate a minority religious identity on the margins of society dana brand traces the origin of the flaneur to seventeenth century english literature and to nineteenth century american literature while the number of domestic leisure travelers has increased dramatically in reform era china the persistent gap between urban and rural living standards attests to ongoing social economic and political inequalities the state has widely touted tourism for its potential to bring wealth and modernity to rural ethnic minority communities but the policies underlying the development of tourism obscure some complicated realities in tourism after all one person s leisure is another person s labor a landscape of travel investigates the contested meanings and unintended consequences of tourism for those people whose lives and livelihoods are most at stake in china s rural ethnic tourism industry the residents of village destinations drawing on ethnographic research conducted in ping an a zhuang village in guangxi and upper jidao a miao village in guizhou jenny chio analyzes the myriad challenges and possibilities confronted by villagers who are called upon to do the work of tourism she addresses the shifting significance of migration and rural mobility the visual politics of tourist photography and the effects of touristic desires for exotic difference on village social relations in this way chio illuminates the contemporary regimes of labor and leisure and the changing imagination of what it means to be rural ethnic and modern in china today the nineteenth century provides a broad scholarly introduction to nineteenth century philosophy it also contains a glossary of philosophical terms and a chronological table of philosophical and cultural events embattled reason constitutes an intellectual profile of one of america s preeminent sociologists this collection of essays published over the course of thirty years embodies a series of intellectual choices in response to current concerns and to debates of the past affording a coherent and unified view of bendix s work as a whole the articles are grouped under three headings in conditions of knowledge the author is concerned with the value assumptions basic to the social sciences under theoretical perspectives the author presents the guiding considerations of his own work in a continuing dialogue with such thinkers as Tocqueville, Marx, Durkheim and Weber. In the last section, Bendix takes up problems involved in an analysis of social change through a reexamination of evolutionist assumptions. This volume of commentaries on racial and ethnic relations is a sociological assessment of a changing society and a personal statement about many of the most pressing racial issues since the 1954 Brown Supreme Court decision. From the perspective of humanistic sociology, Peter Rose shows that sociology need not be a cold, artless science and argues that sociological enterprise should treat future as well as past and present issues. The massacre of the Donnelly's by their fellow church members has fascinated the public in the English speaking world for well over a hundred years. Contained in this book are intriguing new photographs never before published and significant new information which will pique the interest even of those who have been familiar for years with this bit of North American folk history. With Irish roots, twenty-nine collected essays represent a critical history of Shakespeare's play as text and as theater, beginning with Samuel Johnson in 1765 and ending with a review of the Royal Shakespeare Company production in 1991. The criticism centers on three aspects of the play: the love/friendship debate, after a period in which sociology was torn apart by the polarized claims of micro and macro methodology, an increasing number of sociologists are now attempting a fusion of the two approaches. In this volume, some of the most distinguished sociologists set out possible resolutions of the debate. Each of the chapters is placed in perspective by the editors' prologue, which approaches the problem from a unique angle. Aaron Cicourel argues for a macro basis of social interaction; Randall Collins shows how the macro consists of an aggregate of micro episodes; Troy Duster presents a methodological model for generating a systematic data base across different contexts of social action through his examination of the procedures governing screening for inherited disorders; Rom Harré launches a philosophical attack on what he sees as a spurious bifurcation of micro and macro levels; Anthony Giddens explores the problem of unintended consequences; Gilles Fauconnier, through a depiction of Jesuitical casuistry, shows how vital clues to macro structure can be elicited from the micro phenomenon of language; Victor Lidz continues the language theme in his chapter on the implications of advances in linguistic theory for macro systems theory; Niklas Luhmann illustrates the micro/macro problem by the communication about law in interaction systems; the theory of historical materialism is reassessed by Jürgen Habermas, taking the example of Renault and electric vehicles; Michel Callon and Bruno Latour investigate how micro actor status is attained and the sociologist's involvement in this transformation; finally, Pierre Bourdieu, writing on men and machines, analyses the historical imperatives that create the complex relation between man and his environment. PM is the ultimate guide to our high-tech lifestyle. The present international order is characterized by the rapid globalization of economic activity, by systematic attempts to coordinate state responses to the outbreaks of violence and by unilateral military interventions against sovereign states, either by the USA or by one of its regional allies. This collection explores the changes that the current international order has brought to the theory and practice of recognition of secessionist claims and to the conditions for secessionist mobilization. The volume examines how independence movements achieve legitimacy amongst both their target populations and outside states and how the forces of increasing economic globalization and political interdependence impact on secessionist mobilization. It addresses how the outside states recognize the independence of new states and whether the claims to independent statehood can be justified within normative theories of secession and international law. These issues are explored both through comparative analysis within legal, international relations and political science frameworks and through an examination of several recent attempts at secession.
