originally appeared under the title tonality atonality pantonality with contributions by major composers and writers this text presents an essential overview of the changing terrain of experimental music both pop and classical this study investigates the idea and practice of liveness in modern music understanding what makes music live in an ever changing musical and technological terrain is one of the more complex and timely challenges facing scholars of current music where liveness is typically understood to represent performance and to stand in opposition to recording amplification and other methods of electronically mediating music the book argues that liveness itself emerges from dynamic tensions inherent in mediated musical contexts tensions between music as an acoustic human utterance and musical sound as something produced or altered by machines sanden analyzes liveness in mediatized music music for which electronic mediation plays an intrinsically defining role exploring the role this concept plays in defining musical meaning in discussions of music from both popular and classical traditions sanden demonstrates how liveness is performed by acts of human expression in productive tension with the electronic machines involved in making this music whether on stage or on recording liveness is not a fixed ontological state that exists in the absence of electronic mediation but rather a dynamically performed assertion of human presence within a technological network of communication this book provides new insights into how the ideas of performance and liveness continue to permeate the perception and reception of even highly mediatized music within a society so deeply invested on every level with the use of electronic technologies reproduction of the original studies in modern music by w h hadow excerpt from tonality in modern music the following study was written within a few months but its content developed as the result of almost a life time s search thus a few words about the idea which motivated the search may be justified this book is meant as a plea and stimulation for that part of the contemporary compositional endeavour which is outspokenly modern in style perhaps even radically modern yet at the same time attempts to retain and renew the vitality of expression and human appeal that always characterized great music in this sense the book may find itself somewhat in opposition to compositional manifesta tions derived from the concept of atonality and some tech niques affiliated with it but it will also and perhaps even more strongly be in opposition to those contrary tenden cies that seek a solution in aesthetic eclecticism in the necessarily futile attempt to fill old shells with artistic life instead the book will set up an artistic goal of its own neither tied to the rigidity of a new structural scheme nor directed towards musical formations of the past though therefore the impulse behind the following deductions is an aesthetic and spiritual one the presentation of this im pulse may often inevitably assume a technical character however the reader will understand that the technical terms are merely formulations through which In the musi eiau s vernacular the artistic and human ideas which are the real issue in this study can be more accurately de scribed about the publisher forgotten books
