The History of Urdu Language

2018-12-23

Urdu language member of the Indo-Aryan group within the Indo-European family of languages. Urdu is spoken by more than 100 million people predominantly in Pakistan and India. It is the official state language of Pakistan and is also officially recognized or scheduled in the constitution of India. Significant speech communities exist in the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom, and the United States, as well. Notably, Urdu and Hindi are mutually intelligible. Urdu developed in the 12th century CE from the regional Apabhramsha of northwestern India, serving as a linguistic modus vivendi after the Muslim conquest. Its first major poet was Amir Khusrow (1253–1325), who composed dohas, couplets, folk songs, and riddles in the newly formed speech then called Hindvi. This mixed speech was variously called Hindvi Zaban, e Hind Hindi Zaban, e Delhi Rekhta, Gujari Dakhkhani Zaban, e Urdu, e Mualla Zaban, e Urdu, or just Urdu, literally the language of the camp. Major Urdu writers continued to refer to it as Hindi or Hindvi until the beginning of the 19th century, although there is evidence that it was called Hindustani in the late 17th century. Hindustani now refers to a simplified speech form that is India's largest lingua franca. Urdu is closely related to Hindi, a language that originated and developed in the Indian subcontinent. They share the same Indic base and are so similar in phonology and grammar that they appear to be one language in terms of lexicon. However, they have borrowed extensively from different sources: Urdu from Arabic and Persian, Hindi from Sanskrit. So they are usually treated as independent languages. Their distinction is most marked in terms of writing systems: Urdu uses a modified form of Perso-Arabic script, while Hindi uses Devanagari.

although a major language in itself urdu has borrowed words from three major languages of the world namely persian arabic and english with various loan morphological and phonological features there have been very few studies on this phenomenon and many features are still unexplored this study focuses on loanword morphology and looks at the nature of loanwords borrowed from these three languages the book begins by examining the morphological adaptation of loanwords secondly parallels and differences are explored between the relatively recent adaptation of english loans and the older adaptation of words from arabic and persian the descriptive content of the book covering as it does not only english loanwords but those from arabic and persian as well in addition to examining native urdu structures is refreshingly broad the study itself is primarily descriptive carefully teasing apart the sometimes complex interactions between syntax semantics and linguistic function relative to loanword adaptation however even beyond the question of loanword adaptation there is much to recommend itself descriptively here with regard to the morphological structures of urdu including endocentric exocentric copulative postpositional and verbal compounds in addition to such derivational processes this study also considers various inflectional issues such as gender number and case morphology the pluralisation of english nominal loans and the adaptation of english verbs through the use of urdu dummy verbs the book offers a good foundation for a more in depth examination of the data against current morphological theory taken as a whole it not only presents a large quantity of interesting data in pursuing the immediate question of loanword adaptation in urdu but also provides a fruitful starting point for a wealth of further investigations into urdu and into loanword adaptation more generally
