book excerpt ound plausible enough and i can quite understand a real lover of his native tongue who has not bestowed much thought upon the subject arguing in this manner and yet indeed such argument proceeds altogether on a mistake one sufficient reason why we should occupy ourselves with the past of our language is because the present is only intelligible in the light of the past often of a very remote past indeed there are anomalies out of number now existing in our language which the pure logic of grammar is quite incapable of explaining which nothing but a knowledge of its historic evolutions and of the disturbing forces which have made themselves felt therein will ever enable us to understand even as again unless we possess some knowledge of the past it is impossible that we can ourselves advance a single step in the unfolding of the latent capabilities of the language without the danger of committing some barbarous violation of its very primary laws the plan which i have laid excerpt from english past and present five lectures in a few places i have been obliged again to go over ground which i had before gone over in a little book on the study of words but i believe that i have never merely repeated myself nor given to the readers of my former work and now of this any right to complain that i am compelling them to travel a second time by the same paths at least it has been my endeavor whenever i have found myself at points where the two books come necessarily into contact that what was treated with any fullness before should be here touched on more lightly and only what there about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works building on a substantial earlier literature the chapters in this volume further advance knowledge and understanding of properties of the noun phrase in english the empirical material for the papers includes both historical and present day data with the two often shedding light on each other in a process of mutual illumination the topics addressed are the structure of nounless nps like the poor and the obvious the article zero alternation in expressions like go to the church developments in the early history of adjective stacking the semantics of n clause units in present day english the history of n be clause constructions and the decline of two anaphoric nps in early modern english the volume will appeal to scholars working in this area and will also help those interested in the general field of english grammar to keep abreast of recent methods and results in np related work english a composite language a very slight acquaintance with the history of our own language will teach us that the speech of chaucer s age is not the speech of skelton s that there is a great difference between the language under elizabeth and that under charles the first between that under charles the first and charles the second between that under charles the second and queen anne that considerable changes had taken place between the beginning and the middle of the last century and that johnson and fielding did not write altogether as we do now for in the course of a nation s progress new ideas are evermore mounting above the horizon while others are lost sight of and sink below it others again change their form and aspect others which seemed united split into parts and as it is with ideas so it is with their symbols words new ones are perpetually coined to meet the demand of an advanced understanding of new feelings that have sprung out of the decay of old ones of ideas that have shot forth from the summit of the tree of our knowledge old words meanwhile fall into disuse and become obsolete others have their meaning narrowed and defined synonyms diverge from each other and their property is parted between them nay whole classes of words will now and then be thrown overboard as new feelings or perceptions of analogy gain ground a history of the language in which all these vicissitudes should be pointed out in which the introduction of every new word should be noted so far as it is possible and much may be done in this way by laborious and diligent and judicious research in which such words as have become obsolete should be followed down to their final extinction in which all the most remarkable words should be traced through their successive phases of meaning and in which moreover the causes and occasions of these changes should be explained such a work would not only abound in entertainment but would throw more light on the development of the human mind than all the brainspun systems of metaphysics that ever were written these words which thus far are not my own but the words of a greatly honoured friend and teacher who though we behold him now no more still teaches and will teach by the wisdom of his writings and the nobleness of his life they are words of archdeacon hare i have put in the forefront of my lectures seeing that they anticipate in the way of masterly sketch all which i shall attempt to accomplish and indeed draw out the lines of much more to which i shall not venture so much as to put my hand they are the more welcome to me because they encourage me to believe that if in choosing the english language its past and its present as the subject of that brief course of lectures which i am to deliver in this place i have chosen a subject which in many ways transcends my powers and lies beyond the range of my knowledge it is yet one in itself of deepest interest and of fully recognized value nor can i refrain from hoping that even with my imperfect handling it is an argument which will find an answer and an echo in the hearts of all who hear me which would have found this at any time which will do so especially at the present structuring sense explores the difference between words however defined and structures however constructed it sets out to demonstrate over three volumes that the explanation of linguistic competence should be shifted from lexical entry to syntactic structure from memory of words to manipulation of rules its reformulation of how grammar and lexicon interact has profound implications for linguistic philosophical and psychological theories about human mind and language hagit borer departs from language specific constructional approaches and from lexicalist approaches to argue that universal hierarchical structures determine interpretation and that language variation emerges from the morphological and phonological properties of inflectional material taking form the third and final volume of structuring sense applies this radical approach to the construction of complex words integrating research in syntax and morphology the author develops a new model of word formation arguing that on the one hand the basic building blocks of language are rigid semantic and syntactic functions while on the other hand they are roots which in themselves are but packets of phonological information and are devoid of both meaning and grammatical properties of any kind within such a model syntactic category syntactic selection and argument structure are all mediated through syntactic structures projected from rigid functions or alternatively constructed through general combinatorial principles of syntax such as chomsky s merge the meaning of words in turn does not involve the existence of lexemes but rather the matching of a well defined and phonologically articulated syntactic domain with conceptual content itself outside the domain of language as such in a departure from most current models of syntax but in line with many philosophical traditions then the exo skeletal model partitions meaning into formal functions on the one hand and content on the other hand while the former are read off syntactico semantic structures as is usually assumed content is crucially read off syntactico phonological structures this textbook approaches second language acquisition from the perspective of generative linguistics roumyana slabakova reviews and discusses paradigms and findings from the last thirty years of research in the field focussing in particular on how the second or additional language is represented in the mind and how it is used in communication the adoption and analysis of a specific model of acquisition the bottleneck hypothesis provides a unifying perspective the book assumes some non technical knowledge of linguistics but important concepts are clearly introduced and defined throughout making it a valuable resource not only for undergraduate and graduate students of linguistics but also for researchers in cognitive science and language teachers during the last 10 years more and more linguistic and psycholinguistic research has been devoted to the study of discourse and written texts much of this research deals with the markers that underline the connections and the breaks between clauses and sentences plus the use of these markers by adults and children in the production and comprehension of oral and written material in this volume major observations and theoretical views from both sides of the atlantic are brought together to appeal to a wide range of linguists psychologists and speech therapists the volume presents contributions from researchers interested specifically in adult language and from others concerned with developmental aspects of language some contributors deal primarily with production whereas others concentrate on comprehension some direct their attention to oral discourse while others focus on written texts to preserve overall coherence however the contributors were given the following recommendations with regard to the level of linguistic analysis the emphasis should be on the clause level more particularly on the relationships between clauses special emphasis should also be placed on linguistic markers e g connectives markers of segmentation punctuation an overview of a given field of research should be offered and current research should be put into perspective for contributors in the developmental field attention should be paid to the fact that an account of the acquisition of some language functions throughout childhood should be included only if general principles of interclause relations that might be masked by the exclusive examination of adult evidence could be derived from it
