this report is an exploratory study of the employment of off duty police officers for police duties in the private sector focuses on the major organizational and management issues involved in letting officers be privately employed uniformed and with full police powers study data came from 13 selected county and municipal police departments from several areas of the country secondary employment is an accepted practice in all the police departments some departments permit private employers to rent police vehicles and other police services as well the departments have similar rules and practices concerning secondary employment but each department has evolved its own method of organizing and managing this employment the major difference among departments is whether their organization conforms to an officer contract or a department contract system of secondary employment the departments all forbid officers from owning a private security firm or brokering the employment of fellow officers policy and management issues involved in secondary employment include legal liability conflict of interest misconduct and misuse of authority the handling of complaints and off duty court attendance public police have an advantage over private police in both their greater formal authority and their greater informal powers the officer contract system requires less organization and administration than does the department contract system however municipalities with 100 000 or more residents seem to be shifting toward the department contract system which appears to be a more rational way to allocate staff when private demand for police service exceeds the supply few women seek the profession of law enforcement and even less stay until retirement in crossing the line the eighth woman ever to retire from the fairfax county police department in virginia offers an in depth glimpse into her life as a female police officer when connie novak was hired by the fairfax county police in 1979 there were 700 sworn officers of which just thirty were women as novak chronicles the good and the evil the lighthearted and the insane the humorous and the sad she allows others to see what really goes on behind the yellow police tape from boot camp where she was clobbered with a right hook and learned how to shoot a handgun and shotgun to the bulletproof vest that made her look like dolly parton to the gun belt that bruised her hips on a regular basis novak tells a fascinating story of how she balanced a shift based career where personal sacrifice is expected with the demands of motherhood where little people depended on her for everything crossing the line offers a compelling look into an honorable profession where officers must be lifesavers marriage counselors judges and parents all while keeping their emotions in check this is real life
