excerpt from reading and study more effective study through better reading habits nevertheless in spite of the close association of the terms in common speech and the presence of reading as an activity in study the two terms are not synonymous in meaning there are reading activities which are not study and study activities which are not reading but there are obvious close relationships which are seen even by the casual observer he knows that when a child is attempting to master a textbook lesson the activity is reading and at the same time study he also realizes that without the ability to read such study as is done with books in this manner is impossible it is natural to conclude then that teaching a child to master the mechanics of the printed page is in effect teaching him how to study in a limited sense this is true but there are many activities in study that are not reading in this sense stly and reading pfited out teaching the child to read unless reading is fully understood in its broader meaning seldom teaches him how to study effectively the ability merely to pronounce the words on the printed page while very essential is only the preliminary preparation for study in its broader sense about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works excerpt from how to study and teaching how to study some seven or eight years ago the question of how to teach children to study happened to be included in a list of topics that i hastily prepared for discussion with one of my classes on my later examination of this problem i was much surprised both at its difficulty and scope and also at the extent to which it had been neglected by teachers ever since that time the two questions how adults should study and how children should be taught to study have together been my chief hobby the following ideas are partly the result of reading but since there is a meagre quantity of literature bearing on this general theme they are largely the result of observation experiment and discussion with my students many of the latter will recognize their own contributions in these pages for i have endeavored to preserve and use every good suggestion that came from them and i am glad to acknowledge here my indebtedness to them in addition i must express my thanks for valuable criticisms to my colleague dr george d strayer and also to dr lida b earhart whose suggestive monograph on the same general subject has just preceded this publication about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
