one of the great paradoxes of post medieval europe is why instead of bringing peace to a disorganised and violent world modernity instead produced a seemingly endless string of conflicts and social upheavals why was it that the foundation and institutionalisation of secured peace and the rule of law seemed to go hand in hand with the proliferation of war and the violation of individual and collective rights in order to try to better understand such profound questions this volume explores the history and theories of political thought of international relations in the seventeenth century a period in which many of the defining features and boundaries of modern europe were fixed and codified with the discovery of the new world and the fundamental impact of the reformation the complexity of international relations increased considerably reactions to these upheavals resulted in a range of responses intended to address the contradictions and conflicts of the anarchical society of states alongside the emergence of modern international law the equation of international relations with the state of nature and the development of the balance of power diplomatic procedures and commercial customs arose which shaped the emerging and current international system of states employing a multidisciplinary approach to address these issues this volume brings together political scientists philosophers historians of political thought jurists and scholars of international relations what emerges is a certain tension between the different strands of research which allows for a fruitful new synthesis in this respect the assembled essays in this volume offer a sophisticated and fresh account of the interactions of law conflict and the nation state in an early modern european context

European traders and soldiers established a foothold on Timor in the course of the seventeenth century motivated by the quest for the commercially vital sandalwood and the intense competition between the Dutch and the Portuguese lords of the land lords of the sea focuses on two centuries of contacts between the indigenous polities on Timor and the early colonials and covers the period 1600-1800 in contrast with most previous studies the book treats Timor as a historical region in its own right using a wide array of Dutch, Portuguese and other original sources which are compared with the comprehensive corpus of oral tradition recorded on the island from this rich material a lively picture emerges of life and death in early Timorese society the forms of trade, slavery, warfare, alliances, social life and so forth the investigation demonstrates that the European groups although having a role as ordering political forces were only part of the political landscape of Timor they relied on alliances where the distinction between ally and vassal was moot and led to frequent conflicts and uprisings during a slow and complicated process the often turbulent political conditions involving Europeans, Eurasians and Timorese polities paved the way for the later division of Timor into two spheres of roughly equal size
