this book provides the historical context for the shifting alliances that ended with the termination of the british mandate in palestine during may of 1948 the ottomans were hospitable to jews particularly after the expulsion from spain in 1492 and for centuries thereafter however that changed around the end of the 19th century when jewish interests in palestine encountered a decaying ottoman empire administered by local corrupt officials british interests in the area seemed a welcomed change to european jews seeking to make palestine their national homeland though initially regarded as liberators the british were frequently seen by the jews as enemies even when the two groups fought the turks in wwi and the nazis in wwii deepening gloom of a rainy dusk i seem to look on something not unlike one of the most picturesque and romantic scenes whereon my eyes have ever rested ich weiss nicht was soll esbedeuten but the ridges of the houses opposite begin to show through the steaming mist fantastically like the outlines of the hills i used to see every day years ago and the broad blank lying between me and over the way may easily enough seem filled by the stretch of bay i have watched when it lay wild and drear on the wet evenings of late autumn like this the kindly loving artistic fog and rain which now hide all but the faint and softened outlines of our street have done this for me and lo in bloomsbury i am looking upon sea and hill once more the very sounds of london city life come to help out the illusion that cry of the oyster man below is a good deal more like the scream of some sea bird than most theatrical imitations are like the reality the church bells clinking and tolling for evening service are to me now the bell of the church to which i used to be conducted when a boy on sundays and with which so many of the associations of my afterlife inevitably connect themselves it used to be a dreadful ceremonial that service to us boys on the fine sundays of summer it was bad enough in winter but in summer it became unspeakably more torturing there was a window in the church close to where we used to sit poor little weary yawning martyrs and the branches of an elm flapped unceasingly on the panes tantalus torture was it to watch the tender lucent leaves free in the glorious air of may or june as they flickered across the window and seemed to whisper of the blue sky and the shingly strand and the waves of transparent emerald which they could see and we could not while the organ pealed and the clergyman preached the long sermon to which we never listened i do not know how it is that when i thus sit alone of nights and do not feel inclined to read or steadily to go to work at something every object i see flame cloud or even chimney pot reminds me in an indescribable irresistible way of some object belonging to the dear dull little sea port town where i emanuel temple
