Hope for the Afflicted 2023-06-29 to understand the ethics of immigration we need to start from the way it is enacted and understood by everyday actors through practices of hospitality and hostility drawing on feminist and poststructuralist understandings of ethics and hospitality this book offers a new approach to immigration ethics by exploring state and societal responses to immigration from the global north and south rather than treating ethics as a determinable code for how we ought to behave toward strangers it explores hospitality as a relational ethics an ethics without moralism that aims to understand and possibly transform the way people already do embrace and deflect obligations and responsibilities to each other building from specific examples in colombia turkey and tanzania as well as the eu us and uk hospitality is developed as a structural and emotional practice of drawing and redrawing boundaries of inside and outside belonging and non belonging it thereby actively creates a society as a communal space with a particular ethos from a welcoming home to a racialised hostile environment hospitality is therefore treated as a critical mode of reflecting on how we create a we and relate to others through entangled histories of colonialism displacement friendship and exploitation only through such a reflective understanding can we seek to transform immigration practices to better reflect the real and aspirational ethos of a society instead of simple answers removing borders or creating global migration regimes the book argues for grounded negotiations that build from existing local capacities to respond to immigration immigration is one of the most polarizing issues in contemporary politics it raises questions about identity economic well being the legitimacy of state power and the boundaries of membership and justice how should we think about immigration and what policies should democratic societies pursue some contend that borders should generally be open and people should be free to migrate in search of better lives others insist that governments have the right to unilaterally close their borders and should do so in immigration and democracy sarah song develops an intermediate ethical position that takes seriously both the claims of receiving countries and the claims of prospective migrants she argues that political membership is morally significant even if morally arbitrary political membership grounds particular rights and obligations and a government may show some partiality toward the interests of its members yet we also have universal obligations to those outside our orders where prospective migrants have urgent reasons to move as in the case of refugees their interests may trump the less weighty interests of members what is required is not open or closed borders but open doors an accessible ethical framework that clarifies and deepens the ideas with which members of democratic societies can debate immigration immigration and democracy considers the implications of a realistically utopian theory for immigration law and policy

A Relational Ethics of Immigration 2024-02-28 how are refugee crises solved this has become an urgent question as global displacement rates continue to climb and refugee situations now persist for years if not decades the resolution of displacement and the conflicts that force refugees from their homes is often explained as a top down process led and controlled by governments and international organizations this book takes a different approach through contributions from scholars working in politics anthropology law sociology and philosophy and a wide range of case studies it explores the diverse ways in which refugees themselves interpret create and pursue solutions to their plight it investigates the empirical and normative significance of refugees engagement as agents in these processes and their implications for research policy and practice this book speaks both to academic debates and to the broader community of peacebuilding humanitarian and human rights scholars concerned with the nature and dynamics of agency in contentious political contexts and identifies insights that can inform policy and practice

25 Million Sparks 2022-05-26 most western liberal democracies are parties to the united nations refugees convention and all are committed to the recognition of basic human rights but they also spend billions fortifying their borders detaining unauthorised immigrants and policing migration meanwhile public debate over the west's obligations to unauthorised immigrants is passionate vitriolic and divisive refugees and the myth of human rights combines philosophical historical and legal analysis to clarify the key concepts at stake in the debate and to demonstrate the threat posed by contemporary border regimes to rights protection and the rule of law within liberal democracies using the political philosophy of john locke and immanuel kant the book highlights the tension in liberalism between partiality towards one's compatriots and the universalism of human rights and brings this tension to life through an examination of hannah arendt's account of the rise and decline of the modern nation state it provides a novel reading of arendt's critique of human rights and her concept of the right to have rights the book argues that the right to have rights must be secured globally in limited form but that recognition of its significance should spur expansive changes to border policy within and between liberal states

We Thought It Would Be Heaven 2023-08-22 syrians crossing the mediterranean in ramshackle boats bound for europe sudanese refugees their belongings on their backs fleeing overland into neighboring countries children separated from their parents at the us mexico border these are the images that the global refugee crisis conjures to many in the news we often see photos of people in transit suffering untold deprivations in desperate bids to escape their countries and find safety but behind these images there is a second crisis a crisis of arrival refugees in the 21st century have only three real options urban slums squalid refugee camps or dangerous journeys to seek asylum and none provide genuine refuge in no refuge political philosopher serena parekh calls this the second refugee crisis the crisis of the millions of people who having fled their homes are stuck for decades in the dehumanizing and hopeless limbo of refugees camps and informal urban spaces most of which are in the global south ninety nine percent of these refugees are never resettled in other countries their suffering only begins when they leave their war torn homes as parekh urgently argues by drawing from numerous first person accounts conditions in many refugee camps and urban slums are so bleak that to make people live in them for prolonged periods of time is to deny them human dignity it's no wonder that refugees increasingly risk their lives to seek asylum directly in the west drawing from extensive first hand accounts of life as a refugee with nowhere to go parekh argues that we need a moral response to these crises one that assumes the humanity of refugees in addition to the challenges that states have when they accept refugees only once we grasp that the global refugee crisis has these two dimensions the asylum crisis for western states and the crisis for refugees who cannot find refuge can we reckon with a response proportionate to the complexities we face countries and citizens have a moral obligation to address the structures that unjustly prevent refugees from accessing the minimum conditions of human dignity as parekh shows there are ways we as citizens can respond to the global refugee crisis and indeed we are morally obligated to do so

statelessness is a legal status denoting lack of any nationality a status whereby the otherwise normal link between an individual and a state is absent the increasingly widespread problem of statelessness has profound legal social economic and psychological consequences but also gives rise to the paradox of an international community that claims universal standards for all natural persons while allowing its member states to allow statelessness to occur in this powerfully argued book conklin critically evaluates traditional efforts to recognize and reduce statelessness the problem he argues rests in the obligatory nature of law domestic or international by closely analysing a broad spectrum of court and tribunal judgments from many jurisdictions conklin explains how confusion has arisen between two discourses the one discourse inside the other as to the nature of the international community one discourse a surface discourse describes a community in which international law justifies a state s freedom to confer withdraw or withhold nationality this international community incorporates state freedom over nationality matters bringing about the de jure and effective stateless condition the other discourse an inner discourse highlights a legal bond of socially experienced relationships such a bond judicially referred to as effective nationality is binding upon all states and where such a bond exists harm to a stateless person represents harm to the international community as a whole

Building a Stronger Diplomatic Presence 2008 migration has contributed to the society we live in today and as such it is part of our shared history both the causes and the consequences are multifaceted and complicated while many people leave their homes as a result of conflict or poverty others move under conditions of peace political stability and development a large share of international migrants originated from rural areas this is an important part of the structural transformation of an economy and is an important part of the structural transformation of an economy examining the complex interlinkages of migration with agriculture this report examines the existing literature and provides evidence from both developed and developing countries focusing on why people from rural areas decide to migrate it explores the drivers of migration both international and internal and aims to deepen our understanding of the interlinkages with agriculture food security and rural development this report assesses the impact of migration on countries of origin and destination focusing on rural areas and the agricultural sector it discusses how agricultural and social policies can address challenges and capitalize on opportunities created by migration trends

Refugee States 2021 the book is a rich piece of scholarship that makes a contribution at the levels of history theory and policy and deserves to be widely read and considered alexander betts university of oxford the link between migration and development has risen on the agenda of the international community in recent years and global level dialogues have started in her book saskia koppenberg gives an in depth analysis of the global forum on migration and development gfmd the most important and most widely recognised dialogue she provides striking insights into the theories that lie behind the subjects that dominate the gfmd and identifies the perspectives which have so far been neglected by investigating which migrants are addressed what the dominant development approach is how migrants are expected to contribute to development and who the targeted beneficiaries are koppenberg makes the gfmd accessible to the academic and public discourse with regard to the 2 year assessment process evaluating the gfmd which is set to conclude by the end of 2012 the study provides valuable recommendations for the ways in which a more successful and comprehensive gfmd can be attained in the future koppenberg broadens the perspective and takes a look at other global level dialogues beyond the gfmd the study includes a comparative analysis of the unhcr led dialogue on targeting development assistance tda which discusses the link between forced migration and development this perspective highlights how particular forms of migration and certain kinds of development dominate the debates while others are left out it reveals forced migrants have largely been absent from the gfmd agenda despite the fact that their potential to be agents of development has been acknowledged while identifying the differences and commonalities in the prevalent subjects concepts and theories that link migration and forced migration to development in these two dialogues a migrant centred approach is introduced this guides the reader s view towards the migrants own development and their development perspectives while keeping in mind that in terms of agency vs structure the migration development nexus builds upon the migrants agency based on her study saskia koppenberg argues that the traditional migration and development agenda of the gfmd should be broadened to include marginalised perspectives and to offer a migrant centred approach in order to provide a more comprehensive and effective global level dialogue on migration and development that ensures the migrants well being and leads to the highest possible impact on development

At Europe's Edge 2019 the convention relating to the status of refugees adopted on 28 july 1951 in geneva continues to provide the most comprehensive codification of the rights of refugees yet attempted consolidating previous international instruments relating to refugees the 1951 convention with its 1967 protocol marks a cornerstone in the development of international refugee law at present there are 149 states parties to one or both of these instruments expressing a worldwide consensus on the definition of the term refugee and the fundamental rights to be granted to refugees these facts demonstrate and underline the extraordinary significance of these instruments as the indispensable legal basis of international refugee law this commentary provides for a systematic and comprehensive analysis of the 1951 convention and the 1967 protocol on an article by article basis exposing the interrelationship between the different articles and discussing the latest developments in international refugee law in addition several thematic contributions analyse questions of international refugee law which are of general significance such as regional developments the interrelationship between refugee law and general human rights law as well as the relationship between refugee law and the law of the sea

The linkages between migration, agriculture, food security and rural development 2018 the global crisis of forced displacement is growing every year at the same time western christians sympathy toward refugees is increasingly overshadowed by concerns about personal and national security economics and culture we urgently need a perspective that understands both scripture and current political realities and that can be applied at the levels of the church the nation and the globe in refugee reimagined mark r glanville and luke glanville offer a new approach to compassion for displaced people a biblical ethic of kinship god s people they argue are consistently called to extend kinship a mutual responsibility and solidarity to those who are marginalized and without a home drawing on their respective expertise in old testament studies and international relations the two brothers engage a range of disciplines to demonstrate how this ethic is consistently conveyed throughout the bible and can be practically embodied today glanville and glanville apply the kinship ethic to issues such as the current mission of the church national identity and sovereignty and possibilities for a cooperative global response to the refugee crisis challenging the fear based ethic that often motivates christian approaches they envision a more generous creative and hopeful way forward refugee reimagined will equip students activists and anyone interested in refugee issues to understand the biblical model for communities and how it can transform our world

Refugees, Migrants, and Development 2011 as globalisation gains momentum international migration continues to divide opinion and polarise policy makers politicians and advocates this polarisation has been reflected in research and publications with pro globalisation being pitched against anti globalisation on the one hand and an explosion of research on migration on the other this book examines the interaction between the two and their impact on health for the first time highlighting the myths and realities from an international multi disciplinary perspective the book starts with an examination of the complex and multifaceted aspects of the globalisation phenomenon and its impact on population displacement and health and concludes with a regional level analysis supported by country specific examples by highlighting common issues and differences across the globe this book shows policy makers political leaders and international committees on migration the specificities of global migration and good practice across the world particular attention is paid to practical policy responses and governance as well as legal frameworks to manage the dynamics of migration engage international institutions and to maximise the benefits that internal and international migration bring contents globalisation migration and health an introduction andré m n renzaho forced and voluntary migration patterns of internal and international migration burden of diseases and policy response forced internal displacement pattern health impacts and policy response andré m n renzaho the social and health dimensions of refugees and complex humanitarian emergencies joseph kamara and andré m n renzaho health social and economic impact of voluntary migration andré m n renzaho case studies asylum seekers healthy migrant effect and access and utilisation of health services invisible and suffering prolonged and systematic detention of asylum seekers living in substandard conditions in greece sheila cyril and andré m n renzaho the health status service needs and barriers to accessing care for detention and community based asylum seekers in australia emily hadgkiss and andré m n renzaho women children and men trapped in unsafe corridors kevin pottie chuck hui and fabien schneider migration and health effects in the netherlands paul herfs and olta gishti health equity evidence based guidelines e learning and physician advocacy for migrant populations in canada kevin pottie and doug gruner hispanic immigration and the epidemiological paradox mary lou de leon siantz migration and the healthy migrant effect in australia current knowledge gaps and opportunity for future research andré m n renzaho the social dimensions of internal migration and health in china andré m n renzaho migration
