Coping with Prejudice

2020-08-20

modern social psychology has devoted a significant share of its resources to the study of human prejudice most research to date has focused on those groups that exhibit prejudice however a number of recent studies have begun to investigate prejudice from the perspective of its targets these studies have shown prejudice to be a powerful stressor that places unique and costly demands on its targets they have also identified a number of strategies that targets of prejudice use to cope with their predicaments these findings hold real promise for scholars of early christianity for not only were early christians frequently the targets of religious prejudice they were to become its perpetrators soon enough but much of what they wrote sought either directly or indirectly to address this problem in this study paul a holloway applies the findings of social psychology to the early christian pseudepigraphon known as 1 peter he argues that 1 peter marks one of the earliest attempts by a christian author to craft a more or less comprehensive response to anti christian prejudice and its outcomes unlike later apologists however who also wrote in response to anti christian prejudice the author of 1 peter does not seek to influence directly the thoughts and actions of those hostile to christianity but writes instead for his beleaguered coreligionists consoling them in their suffering and advising them on how to cope with popular prejudice and the persecution it engendered

Nationalism from the Margins

2008-04-15

in Nationalism from the Margins patricia wood offers a fresh approach to the study of immigration adaptation and collective and individual identity formation in analysing a century of italian migration to alberta and british columbia wood documents a multicultural experience and vision of canada that long preceded the official policy of 1971 she argues that nationalism is not one idea but a relationship of voices speaking from varying levels of political and social power and to varying audiences the italian understanding of what it means to belong to canada does not require the abandonment of ethnic identity but instead demonstrates the ways in which layers of identity intersect wood introduces the more spatial concept of relocation and emphasizes the complex and negotiated nature of immigrant identities she highlights the immigrants roles as active participants in the creation of their own local regional and national spaces underlining the importance of an interdisciplinary approach to immigrant history highlighting the marginalized status of these immigrants as southern europeans catholics and residents of western canada wood brings their voice to the centre and shows them to be agents in the production of their identities
