the term transeurasian refers to a large group of geographically adjacent languages stretching from the pacific in the east to the mediterranean in the west they share a significant amount of linguistic properties and include five linguistic families japanese korean tungusic mongolic and turkic there is disagreement among scholars on the question whether these languages are genealogically related in the sense of an altaic family many linguists however seem to agree on at least one point namely that investigations into the striking correspondences in the domain of verbal morphology could substantially help unravelling the question the present volume brings together prominent specialists in the field who explore potentially shared features of verbal morphology among the transeurasian languages and search for the best way to explain them important issues dealt with include the following how useful is verbal morphology really in establishing genealogical relations among languages is there concrete evidence for cognate verbal morphology across the transeurasian languages is it possible to draw wider connections with indo european and uralic how to distinguish this book guides readers into the realm of particle accelerators which have served as indispensable tools for fundamental research energy development medical therapy industrial applications national security etc since 1924 towards a new generation of high power proton and ion accelerators challenges often come from space charge effects which are most pronounced in low velocity beams this book focuses on radio frequency quadrupole rfq accelerators one of the most popular front end structures for accelerator facilities and their beam physics uncovering the limitations of the classic design methods novel approaches to achieve efficient rfq accelerators with high beam quality will be presented in addition new ideas for possible future developments such as how to realize long rfqs with high performance and how rfqs can be applied for much higher beam velocities to shorten large scale accelerators will be introduced to provide a general overview of the research and development of rfqs accelerating particle species from protons to uranium ions this book uses over 10 real examples developed or proposed in the twenty first century for various facilities of different dimensions from large scale e g a collider to small scale e g university experimental setups with its rich content and comprehensive scope this book is an invaluable reference for researchers and graduate students interested in rfq accelerators and the intricacies of space charge physics in low velocity beams
