the victorian era to the present relating changes in the guides to shifts in science the craft of field identification and new technologies for the mass reproduction of images drawing on his experience as a passionate birder and on a wealth of archival research thomas dunlap shows how the twin pursuits of recreation and conservation have inspired birders and how field guides have served as the preferred method of informal education about nature for well over a century the book begins with the first generation of late 19th century birdwatchers who built the hobby when opera glasses were often the best available optics and bird identification was sketchy at best as america became increasingly urban birding became more attractive and with roger tory peterson s first field guide in 1934 birding grew in both popularity and accuracy by the 1960s recreational birders were attaining new levels of expertise even as the environmental movement made birding s other pole conservation a matter of human health and planetary survival dunlap concludes by showing how recreation and conservation have reached a new balance in the last 40 years as scientists have increasingly turned to amateurs whose expertise had been honed by the new guides to gather the data they need to support habitat preservation putting nature lovers and citizen activists at the heart of his work thomas dunlap offers an entertaining history of america s long standing love affair with birds and with the books that have guided and informed america is a nation of ardent knowledgeable birdwatchers but how did it become so and what role did the field guide play in our passion for spotting watching and describing birds in the field among the feathered tells the history of field guides to birds in america from the victorian era to the present relating changes in the guides to shifts in science the craft of field identification and new technologies for the mass reproduction of images drawing on his experience as a passionate birder and on a wealth of archival research thomas dunlap shows how the twin pursuits of recreation and conservation have inspired birders and how field guides have served as the preferred method of informal education about nature for well over a century the book begins with the first generation of late 19th century birdwatchers who built the hobby when opera glasses were often the best available optics and bird identification was sketchy at best as america became increasingly urban birding became more attractive and with roger tory peterson s first field guide in 1934 birding grew in both popularity and accuracy by the 1960s recreational birders were attaining new levels of expertise even as the environmental movement made birding s other pole conservation a matter of human health and planetary survival dunlap concludes by showing how recreation and conservation have reached a new balance in the last 40 years as scientists have increasingly turned to amateurs whose expertise had been honed by the new guides to gather the data they need to support habitat preservation putting nature lovers and citizen activists at the heart of his work thomas dunlap offers an entertaining history of america s long standing love affair with birds and with the books that have guided and informed their enthusiasm
